THE MATINEE GIRL

SIR HENRY IRVING died on Friday, the thirteenth. It was an unlucky day for the stage. Players, having passed the first shock of a grief that seemed personal to all of them who had fixed their eyes upon the heights, who entertained ideals as daily guests, are lovingly recalling the words about himself and his art that fell from the lips now forever silent.

They quote this advice: "When I was a boy I had a habit which I think would be useful to all students. Before going to see a play of Shakespeare's I used to form, in a very juvenile way, a theory as to the working out of the whole drama, so as to correct my conceptions by those of the actors. And though I was, as a rule, absurdly wrong, there can be no doubt that any method of study is of enormous importance, not only to youngsters but to children of a larger growth."

Some of the best readers on the stage are quoting these excellent working rules, which they have all applied: "Let the student remember, first, that every sentence expresses a new thought and therefore demands a change of intonation; secondly, that the thought precedes the word. Of course there are passages in which the thought and language are borne along by the stream of emotion and completely intermingled. But more often it will be found that the most natural, the most seemingly accidental, effects are obtained when the working of the mind is visible before the tongue gives it words.

"To appear to be natural you must in reality be much broader than nature. To act on the stage as one really would in a room would be ineffective and colorless. The utterance of the late Charles Mathews appeared so natural that one was surprised to find when near that he was really speaking in a very loud key.

"Pronunciation on the stage should be simple and unaffected, and not always fashioned rigidly according to a dictionary standard. No less an authority than Cicero points out that the pronunciation must differ widely according to the emotions to be expressed, that it may be broken or cut without varying or direct sound and that it serves for the actor the purpose of color to the painter from which to draw his variations. Take the simplest illustration, the pronunciation of 'O' and 'Ah.' You cannot stereotype the expression of emotion like this. These exclamations are words of one syllable, but the speaker who is sounding the gamut of human feeling will not be restricted in his pronunciation by the dictionary route. It is said of Edmund Kean that he never spoke such ejaculations, but sighed or groaned them.

"Fancy an actor saying thus: 'My Desdemona! O-o-o!'

"Words are intended to express ideas and feelings, not to bind them in rigid fetters. The accents of pleasure are different from the accents of pain, and if a feeling is more accurately expressed as in nature by variation of law not provided for by the laws of pronunciation then such imperfect laws must be disregarded and nature vindicated. The word should be the echo of the sense."

Sir Henry Irving has frequently pointed out that a bearing or carriage in accord with the time in which the play is is an important detail of the actor's art; that even the derided and almost obsolete "grand manner" has its place and period. "The free bearing of the sixteenth century," he says, "is distinct from the artificial one of the seventeenth, the mannered one of the eighteenth from the careless one of the nineteenth."

Echoing in their memory and repeated reverently by players is this expression, the last word in his art, the summing up of the professional philosophy of the man who evolved from a messenger boy in the service of the East Indian Company to the most regal stage figure of his time:

"In the consideration of the art of acting it must never be forgotten that its ultimate aim is beauty. Truth itself is only an element of beauty, and to merely reproduce things vile and squalid and mean is a debasement of art. There is apt to be such a tendency in an age of peace and men should carefully watch its manifestations. A mordse and helpless dissatisfaction is not a part of true national life. This is hopeful and earnest and, if need be, militant. It is a bad sign for any nation to yearn for or even tolerate pessimism in its enjoyment, and how can pessimism be other than antagonistic to beauty?

"Life with all its pains and sorrows is a beautiful and precious gift, and the actor's art is to reproduce this beautiful thing, giving due emphasis to those royal virtues and stormy passions which sway the destiny of men.

"All, actors and audience alike, must bear in mind that the whole scheme of the higher drama is not to be regarded as a game in life which can be played with varying success. Its present intention may be to interest and amuse, but its deeper purpose is earnest, intense, sincere."

That humorists lead a dual life and that their alter egos are serious, even sad, men is proven once again by Jerome K. Jerome, that one-time actor, who wrote an autobiographical collection of sketches called "Stageland," that is as well known among the mummer folk as his "Three Men in a Boat, Not Counting the Dog," is known to readers in the audiences. Mr. Jerome is making a lecture tour of the United States. He unwinds a few yards of fair jokes and intersperses them with readings from that exquisitely pathetic story "Paul Kelver." This, for instance, is his impression of a railway journey:

"When I could get my head free of the big man's back I gazed out of the window and watched the flying fragments as we shed the world. Now a village would fall away from us, now the yellow cornland would cling to us for a while or a wood catch at our rushing feet, and sometimes a strong town would stop us and hold us, panting, for a space. Or, my eyes weary, I would sit and listen to the hoarse singing of the wheels beneath my feet. It was a monotonous chaunt, ever the same two lines:

Here we suffer grief and pain,
Here we meet to part again, followed by a low, rumbling laugh, sometimes fortissimo, sometimes pianissimo, now vivace, now largo, but ever those same two lines, and ever followed by the same low, rumbling laugh. Still to this day the iron wheels sing to me that same song."

And this sums up his impressions of his own London: "We passed through glittering, joyous streets piled high each side with the good things of earth—toys and baubles, jewels and gold, things good to eat and good to drink, things good to wear and good to see; through pleasant ways where fountains splashed and flowers bloomed. The people wore bright clothes, had happy faces; they rode in beautiful carriages, they strolled about, greeting one another with smiles. The children ran and laughed. London, thought I to myself, is the city of fairies.

It passed and and we sank into a grim city of hoarse, roaring streets, wherein the endless throngs swirled and surged as I had seen the yellow waters curve and fret, contending, where the river passes, rock bound. Here were no bright faces, no bright costumes, none stayed to greet one another; all was stern and swift and voiceless. "London, then," said I to myself, "is the city of the giants. They must live in these towering castles side by side, and these hurrying thousands are their driven slaves."

But this passed also, and we sank lower yet, until we reached a third city, where a pale mist filled each sombre street. None of the beautiful things of the world were to be seen here, but only the things coarse and ugly. And wearily to and fro its sunless passages trudged with heavy steps a weary people, coarse clad and with dull, listless faces. And London, I knew, was the city of gnomes who labor sadly all their lives, imprisoned under ground; and a terror seized me lest I, too, should remain chained here, deep down below the fairy city that was already but a dream.

When Martha Morton wrote The Truth Tellers, a dainty play in the category of Little Lord Fauntleroy and The Little Princess, she probably intended the role of Georgie Mortimer of Finland Castle to be subsidiary, but she reckoned without Little Toy. The urchin, who scarcely looks five years old, captures the houses at sight. He is a wee creature, with a whimsical, rosebud face, an utter lack of self-consciousness and a childish voice whose carrying power half the profession need and covet. The child plays the part of one of the infant terribles, who tells the truth as ballot-box guardians use clubs, but he is generous and when his zeal for "calling a spade a shovel" has misled him he always apologizes "abzhecly." The word, with a deep genuflexion of the wee body, sets the audience a-roar. The baby has a fine little scene of his own; indeed, he has achieved the dignity of a curtain. His sisters fall asleep and baby is left alone with the terrors of the night. He has been told that if he is afraid he shall blow a horn to call for aid. Twice he takes up the horn, with indecision and "abzhect" fear written on his features. But each time he throws it away, his tiny spine stiffening with precocious courage. And so he stands, a mite of a figure in white, dauntless against the background of the mysterious night, taking the chief honors of the second act.

A correspondent writes me of an acquaintance of hers whom she describes as a Shakespearean actor, and asserts that experiences are duplicated and old jokes revived. According to her version of the not young tale the actor was called upon at a small "family dinner" to "say grace." "O Lord," he began, his features distorted with the agony of unaccustomedness. The bard less than Shaw rescued him with a flash of memory. "Now good digestion wait on appetite and health on both. Amen," he finished glibly attacked his oysters.

Here is a copy of the letter written to the manager of a New England theatre by one who aspires to become a Mansfield or a Sothern:

Dear Sir

Wuill you please send me word if you need any one to go and acted with you; Im already if you want to take me with you. Im Fifteen years old; Im gone to be sixteen the 2th of Nov. 1905.

Your very truely Friend.

I send you my best Respect to all of you. Good bye. Answer. Im waiting for it. Please give this letter to the first one that be long that companies that over the opera house now Please tell what day to go and see you.

Though it has a reminiscent flavor I repeat it for the few of this generation who may not have heard it:

A woman who had tickets for a high-class comedy and found that another engagement interfered gave the tickets to her maid. At nine o'clock the maid returned from the playhouse.

"Didn't you enjoy the play, Mary?" asked the surprised mistress.

"Oh yes, mum; I had a good time."

"Then why didn't you wait until the play was over?"

"Well, ma'am, there was a lovely big picture there that covered the whole end of the house. It was an awful pretty picture, and I hadn't half looked at it when somebody jerked it up out of sight and some people came out and talked about their own business. It didn't concern me and I was mad at the fellow that snatched up the picture, so I came home."

THE MATINEE GIRL.

SOUTH AFRICAN MANAGERS IN NEW YORK.

Edward Sass, a member of the old African theatrical firm of Sass and Nelson, Limited, and Pierre Cohen, Mr. Nelson's business director, are in New York. The latter is said to be looking for novelties and artists for the "land of gold," and to propose taking to Johannesburg a complete American musical comedy company with a repertoire of six or seven of the most popular of the modern New York successes in this line.

Mr. Sass, who is here on private business, rather amused the MIRROR representative by telling him that Johannesburg has been such a matrimonial market for women in the profession that his firm has been obliged for some time past to incorporate in women's contracts a penalty of $500 in case of marriage during an engagement. In one case lately a rich man was in such a state of ardor for marriage that he actually paid $1,000 for the release of his inamorata. The leading woman of the last comedy company under Sass and Nelson is to marry in November one of the richest men on the Rand and will enjoy an income of about $75,000 per annum. Two previous marriages in the comedy companies, both of the leading women, brought riches to the respective brides, and in all instances the fortunate women are moving in the highest Johannesburg society.

The women in the musical companies have been equally fortunate, both principles and chorus women, seven having married in Africa, some settling in the country and others accompanying their husbands to England. Truly, Africa can hardly be called a "dark continent" for actresses!

Asked regarding the expense of living in Africa, Mr. Cohen informed the MIRROR representative that Johannesburg, which is the most expensive of the cities, is about on a par with New York. Several good hotels put theatrical people up at from $10 to $12 per week, with full board, service, boot cleaning, baths, etc. There are also magnificent hotels, like the Carlton, just about to open, and the New Langham, which cater either on the American or English principle. Again, artists very rarely play more than six performances per week, matinees being only on special occasions.

Mr. Cohen proposes sailing for Africa in January with the company and entire outfit, hoping to take with him the best available American talent for the performance of American pieces for the pleasure of the large American element of the Johannesburg population.

FEVER QUARANTINE STILL RIGID.

Quarantine regulations in the yellow fever district are still being rigidly enforced, and from accounts in Southern papers the disease seems to be as prevalent as it was a month ago. The MIRROR'S Nashville correspondent reports three companies stranded in that city. He warns managers from attempting to visit that part of the country without taking precautions against being detained by health authorities. Individuals and parties have been summarily removed from trains and sent to observation camps and hospitals or compelled to return to their starting place. In most places the health boards have arbitrary powers and there is no appeal from their actions. The quarantine usually lasts for seven days, but if a case of fever develops in an observation hospital during that period the detention is longer. Printed copies of sanitary regulations can generally be obtained from local health boards.

BERLIN.

New School for Actors—Plays Produced—A Cork Curtain—Actors' Home.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

BERLIN, Oct. 15.

The manager, or, as that personage is here called, the "director," of the Deutsche Theatre, Max Reinhardt, has undertaken the formation of a school of dramatic art, somewhat after the pattern of similar institutions existing in Paris and Vienna. Alexander Strakosch, from the latter city, has been installed as professor in charge, but leading artists, such as Barnay, Friedmann, Kayssler, Gertrud Egsoldt, Adele Sandrock, Heuwig Wanger and others, will lend their aid to the undertaking by giving instruction to the different classes. But the pet project of Director Reinhardt is the training of pupils in the art of stage management, for which purpose a regular stage, provided with all necessary accessories, will be installed. Lectures will be given by the leading stage managers in Berlin, illustrated by practical demonstrations. In fact nothing will be left undone that could be of benefit to the pupils. "Thoroughness" is the adopted motto, and good results will no doubt show themselves in due course of time.

At the Shausplelhaus, Oscar Blumenthal's new play The Vow of Faithfulness was produced. It is a comedy in three acts in the picturesque garb of the Rembrandt period. It deals with the adventures of an artist who has declared that he will never vow faithfulness to any woman. He gets married, notwithstanding, but to a woman who does not in any way curtail his liberty, his freedom of action. Much time does not elapse before the flippant painter gives his poor wife cause for jealousy, but in probing the affair to the bottom the latter discovers that at heart her husband has remained faithful to her. Outside of this meagre plot, the play consisted only of cleverly worded, though trite, epigrams, cheap witticisms, and jokes that grated on the hearer's finer sensibilities, but were applauded by the masses.

Another novelty of the season, produced at the Lustspielhaus, was Jungfer Ambrosia, by Feary Servaes, the well-known Vienna critic, from whose pen no one would have expected such a ridiculous, silly love story to flow as was offered to the public under this title. Strange that a man whose vocation it is to analyze and criticise literary productions could be so blind to the glaring defects of his own. The play has hardly a redeeming feature.

The Freie Volksbühne, at the Metropol Theatre, opened the season with Number 80, and A Coat of Armor, by Hermann Heijermans. Neither scored success sufficient to warrant the labor of translation. Heijermans is not a literary genius, simply a ranter who makes war against something in a loud and boisterous fashion. In Number 80 he inveighs against the present system of imprisonment, depicting a woman awaiting for the release of her husband after a two years' term in prison, only to be informed that during the last night in jail the man has become suddenly insane. This is the whole story of the play, but it is plentifully padded out by invectives against modern society and its penal institutions.

In A Coat of Armor, Heijermann's ire is directed against military ethics. An officer at the head of his company has been ordered to protect a large sugar factory against the attacks of strikers, and, if necessary, to fire into them. When this crucial moment comes the officer finds his heart failing him. He is overpowered by feelings of humanity and refuses to carry out the order. Of course this puts an end to his military career, at a most unfortunate moment for himself, for he is engaged to be married, and this catastrophe blights all his prospects of happiness. The military system is compared by Heijermans to a coat of armor cruelly compressing a man's body and brains, thus turning an individual gifted with powers of thought, judgment and responsibility into a mere piece of machinery that is compelled to obey orders mechanically, and against his own volition.

The National Theatre has been leased to the same company that controls the Metropol Theatre. Under the management of Director Schulz it will be devoted to spectacular plays. It has been renamed the Walhalla Theatre.

The suit brought against Frank Wedekind and his publishers on account of his new play Die Buechse der Pandora, (Pandora's Casket), which was supposed to constitute obscene literature, was conducted behind closed doors, the general public being denied admittance. In the course of the proceedings the entire play was read in the presence of competent judges, one of whom, Prof. Wittkowski, had been summoned from Leipzig. Among those present was also Gerhart Hauptmann. Although the verdict rendered was favorable to Wedekind, it remains to be seen whether Pandora will be permitted to be seen duced on the stage in Berlin. In Vienna the censor refused to grant this permission, and the play had to be performed in private, in the presence of the author's friends only. They were enthusiastic in their praise of the new masterpiece.

Ernst v. Possart has been decorated by the Prime Regent of Bavaria with the Luitpold medal, besides being made honorary member of the Royal Theatre and raised to the rank of Privy Councillor.

The Deutsche Theatre was congratulating itself on having secured Adele Sandrock for the season, when the news came from Vienna that the talented actress had suffered an attack of paralysis of the vocal chords that would compel the canceling of all engagements for some time. In conjunction with Ida Roland and Rudolf Schildkraut, she was to have been the star attraction of Director Reinhardt's troupe.

A drop curtain manufactured out of cork has been installed at the Royal Opera House in Vienna for the purpose of deadening the noise caused by the shifting of scenery—that is to say, preventing same from being heard in the auditorium.

Joseph Kainz has every reason for being satisfied with the three weeks' visit that he paid Berlin, for it netted him the sum of $9,375, and he has the promise of a return engagement of four weeks, for which he will receive $15,000. Not bad for Germany, although these figures do not compare to those paid German artists of renown on their visits to the United States. Sonnenthal, a few years ago, returned from a six weeks' trip abroad with the comfortable sum of $38,000, to say nothing of honors heaped upon him.

In Vienna a home is to be founded to take care of needy, superannuated members of the theatrical profession. Joseph Wimmer, a noted literary man, willed his private residence to the association for that purpose, and further donations are being earnestly solicited. Amalie Schönchen, of the Burg Theatre, left 2,000 kroner to further the project in hand. Arrangements will be made to care for twelve inmates at first. The home is to be known as Empress Elisabeth Artists' Home.

The Grand Duke of Weimar has donated 15,000 marks toward the establishment of a Conservatory of Music at Weimar.

Hans v. Moser, son of that most prolific writer for the stage, Gustav v. Moser, has written three one-act plays, which were recently performed at Bad Reinerz and proved quite a success.

At Munich the fairy drama by Fritz Kayssler, Simplicius, raised a storm of comment, pro and con. Being himself a very talented actor, Kayssler's knowledge of the technique of stagecraft is manifested in the construction of his play, its climaxes, etc. The plot itself lacks originality; in fact it has done duty time and time again. It is not likely that the play will prove an attraction.

REFLECTIONS

Dora Goldthwaite, whose portrait appears above, has not yet arranged her plans for this season. Miss Goldthwaite is an attractive woman and a clever actress.

In the support of Olga Nethersole when she begins her season in the United States will be Louise Moodie, Dorothy Grimston (a daughter of Mrs. Kendal), William Farren, Jr., Herbert Carter and R. Hamilton Revelle. B. A. Meyer is the acting manager and Arthur Betram general manager.

The parents of Sam Shubert brought suit in the United States Circuit Court of New York, October 16 for $200,000 against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, alleging that negligence caused their son's death. The suit is one of several others, aggregating $600,000 and growing out of the same wreck.

Baby Zena Keife made her second appearance last week in Pawtucket, R. I., with the Albee Stock company, having been immediately re-engaged after her success in The Fatal Wedding three weeks ago. During this engagement she appeared in For Her Children's Sake and was warmly welcomed by an enthusiastic audience. Baby Keife has been engaged to appear with the Albee company again in November.

Christine Hudson, who has won much favor this season by her clever work in the part of Tom Tom in Babes in Toyland, was obliged to leave the company at Dayton, Ohio, recently, on account of illness. Miss Hudson is now in Chicago, slowly convalescing, and it may be several weeks before she will be able to rejoin the company.

Clara Mathes, who has been ill at the hospital in Winnipeg, Man., has recovered and will soon be ready to resume work.

Cards have been received announcing the marriage in Paris, on Sept. 26, of Louis Charles Battaille, the son of Madame Charles Battaille, and Madame Roger-Miclos. M. Battaille is the son of a noted singer, the late Charles Battaille, and Madame Roger-Michlos is a well known pianiste. She played in New York and in other American cities as well as in Canada in the Winter of 1903-1904 and is well remembered in social as well as musical circles.

Chauncey Olcott's engagement in Edmund Burke at the Majestic Theatre has been so successful that a return visit in the Spring has been arranged.

Monday of last week, in Richmond, Va., Laura Millard began an extended tour of the country in The Geisha.

Fritz and Snitz will be presented in this city at an early date with Charles A. Mason, a German comedian, as the star. Mr. Mason is a native of Bavaria who has been acting in the West for several years.

The Knights of Columbus, of which order William J. Kelley, leading man at Proctor's 125th Street Theatre, is a member, are arranging a huge theatre party and banquet in honor of Mr. Kelley. It will take place early in November.

Next season Ernest Lamson, who is acting a leading part in The Heir to the Hoorah, will make his debut in New York as a star in a new Western drama of which he is the author.

Albert La Velle has closed his Ruined Lives company because of his inability to get proper bookings. The production is said to be too expensive for one-night stands.

William Richards has been granted a decree of divorce from Marie Richards (Maria Gilmer) by Judge Staples at Milford, Pa.

Augustus Balfour, of Ben Green's Players, has completed a one-act Mexican play, Just Across the Line.

Willard Muck denies that he has remarried since his divorce from Maude Leone in January, 1903.

Harry Ernest, of the Quaker City Quartette, with Al G. Field's Minstrels, received news of his mother's death while playing at Columbia, S. C.

Munster Hall, the original Mr. Bob in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, became ill in the South and was obliged to leave the company for a time. His place was successfully taken by Harry J. Buchanan, his understudy.

Mrs. Fred Waldman has left New York for Kansas City, Mo., to join her husband, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Kansas City.

The Supreme Court of California has reversed an order issued by Superior Judge Coffey appointing a special administrator, upon the petition of Edna Wallace Hopper, to take charge of the property of her stepfather, Alexander Dunsmuir, and approved a petition of James Dunsmuir, distributer of the estate, to prohibit the administrator from taking the property.

Sullivan, Harris and Woods will next send out Nobody's Darling (to be called The Branded Woman) and The Fatal Wedding.

Edith Bradford has returned to the stage after an absence of three years and is now playing the fairy queen in The Pearl and the Pumpkin, succeeding Katheryn Hutchinson.

Pasqualina De Voe, the Italian tragedienne, has withdrawn from the firm of Gordon and Bennett and closed yesterday with The Holy City, in which she has been playing Salome.

Irene Ackerman was re-elected a member of the Professional Woman's League at the last business meeting.

Violet Dale, who was injured in a railroad wreck near Newton, Kan., three weeks ago, is still very ill and her physicians say she will not be able to act for a year.

Mrs. Wilbur Bates (Madame Jaguarina) has secured a divorce.

Minthorne Worthley closed a successful engagement with Riess and Totten in The Bowery News Girl.

Judge Holt has granted a discharge in bankruptcy to Mrs. Sarah Cowell Le Moyne

Knickerbocker—The Taming of the Shrew.

Comedy in five acts by William Shakespeare. Revived Oct. 16.

Baptista	W. H. Crompton
Vincentio	William Harris
Lucentio	Frederick Lewis
Petruchio	E. H. Sothern
Gremio	T. L. Coleman
Hortensio	Pedro De Cordoba
Tranio	Fred Eric
Biondello	Frank Reicher
A Pedant	Frank Kingdon
Tailor	Malcolm Bradley
Haberdasher	Edson R. Miles
Grumio	Rowland Buckstone
Katherina	Julia Marlowe
Bianca	Alice Harrington
Widow	Millicent McLaughlin
Curtis	Mrs. Woodward

Shakespearean conventions, born of a long line of serious minded student-actors and growing more dignified with each stage-generation, have received a smashing blow. E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe played The Taming of the Shrew as though it were a modern, noisy, acrobatic farce. There is no reason to believe that Shakespeare's company played it otherwise. So far as the farcical element of the play is concerned, even to the introduction of all possible accessories to increase the fun, there is no fault to be found with Mr. Sothern's production. Shakespeare might have provided Petruchio with a piebald horse and Grumio's donkey with an enticing bunch of stuffed carrots, had he thought of them, and Mr. Sothern is not to be blamed for such commissions; but the interpolation of lines to suit his own purpose and the addition of a cook and other characters unmentioned in the published texts certainly are not so excusable. The pruning of lines and scenes is not objectionable; the omission of Christopher Sly is rather commendable, though the induction does not give to the comedy a raison d'être. But the cutting out of such scenes as the quarrel between Lucentio and Hortensio in Act III and the leaving in of the scene where the rival schoolmasters become friends is liable to make the story vague to those who have not read it often.

The play opens with the entrance of Lucentio and Tranio and for the first two acts follows closely Shakespeare's text, so far as time and place are concerned. In the second act comes the first noticeable interpolation. Katherina is made to say, in effect, that there is a way of managing a man without his knowledge, a speech which does not occur in the text, but for which Miss Marlowe finds good use. These two acts are without undue boisterousness. Act III of Mr. Sothern's version is occupied with the progress of the love of Bianca and Lucentio and the meeting with the pedant.

Act IV is devoted to the wedding and the incidents at Petruchio's house. In the first scene, the courtyard of Baptista's house, Petruchio's arrival mounted on a piebald horse, the starting of the wedding party for the church, and Petruchio's departure for his home bearing Katherina on the crupper of his horse, begins the rough and tumble farce that marks the rest of the play until the final act. Undoubtedly effective is some of the added business in the second and third scenes, but some of it is unwarranted by the text. Petruchio, after sending Katherina supperless to bed, sits before the fire, caressing her shoes and bedraggled stockings, while he muses on his plans. Katherina, in wooden shoes, clumps down the stairs and to the table in search of food. She threatens with a wooden shoe her apparently sleeping husband and then steals back upstairs. Again, in the third scene, Mr. Sothern has taken the liberty of adding business to complete the incident that Shakespeare's lines leave unfinished. Petruchio insists that it is seven o'clock; Katherina that it is two. But Katherina in this play then counts seven on her fingers, her first concession to Petruchio, and as they leave she takes down one hand and defiantly waves two fingers at her husband's back.

The first scene of Act V completes the story of Bianca and Lucentio and introduces Katherina tamed into calling the sun the moon. The second scene shows the banquet room at Lucentio's house and into it a bit of business is brought that seems to kill the whole intent of the comedy. After Katherina's speech on the duties of wives, and after she has placed her hand on the ground for her husband's foot and he has raised her, Petruchio goes down on his knees before her and lays his hand on the ground, and a triumphant Katherina places her foot upon it. It is not a tamed shrew, but a woman who has changed her method of managing a man.

Miss Marlowe played Katherina, not as a termagant or a headstrong woman, but as one irritated by the weakness of those about her and venting her irritation on them. In her scenes with Petruchio, especially after the wedding, her temper was more petulancy than shrewishness, her anger that of a spoiled child. In enunciation she was delightful and her speech to the two wives in the last act was particularly a pleasure, though she gave it with an air of irony, as if it were said for the benefit of the men and that there would be another tale for the women alone.

Mr. Sothern's Petruchio was boisterous, swaggering, loud voiced, but with a touch of gentleness that redeemed an otherwise disagreeable character. His elocution was not so good as Miss Marlowe's and at times his voice lacked the dominant quality of Petruchio's nature. His playing was entertaining.

The supporting company was not remarkable. Rowland Buckstone as Grumio played that comedy role with earnestness, but sometimes in the spirit of buffoonery that marked much of the play. Fred Eric made a gentleman of Tranio and Frederick Lewis was a satisfactory Lucentio. W. H. Crompton as Baptista, T. L. Coleman as Gremio, and Pedro de Cordoba as Hortensio filled their roles unobtrusively. Frank Reicher was grotesque as Biondello. Alice Harrington played Bianca fairly well, but hardly in a way to induce violent love in so many suitors as she had. Millicent McLaughlin as the Widow and Mrs. Woodward as Curtis acceptably filled those small roles, as did Frank Kingdon as the Pedant, Malcolm Bradley as the Tailor, and Edson R. Miles as the Haberdasher. William Lewis as Vincentio failed to put much life into the scene in which he appeared.

The production is scenically good, but not elaborate, and the costumes and properties are handsome. Especially good is the handling of the extra people in the wedding and banquet scenes. The play as a whole is extremely entertaining, but it is not conventional Shakespeare.

First Huntsman	Henry Sacks

This play failed to please the few who gathered at the Grand Opera House to see what it was all about. They went away with only their guessing powers stimulated. The manager had done his part generously in giving the piece costly cast, costumes and setting, but the expenditure was not justified.

A group of five kilted orphans come to live with their antique aunt, who is a leading light among other incandescents of London society. They have been unpleasantly brought up to tell the truth. In a weary, formless first act there is some interest when they first appear with their big bagpipe player and riding their ponies. All that comes of their truth telling is the unwigging of an ancient dowager and disagreeable and illbred remarks about their aunt's sailing under false colors as to face and hair. In the following three acts they play with dolls and are stationed as guards for a youth who is fleeing from no particular peril. Of course there are subterranean passages, sliding panels and the trappings of anciently mellow drama that are not used dramatically, as there is no trace of suspense, heart interest or genuine comedy. It hasn't the simplicity or genuineness of story to please children of any age. There are a-plenty of storm effects, Autumn leaves and ponies, but they are all used without particular effect.

Maude Fealy had the place of honor as star and right royally deserved it, for she seemed a veritable little princess. She was dainty and sweet, yet played with such artistic repose, sincerity and clearness of enunciation that there was a sense of security and ready homage whenever she was on the stage. She immediately won all hearts by her girlish yet womanly qualities, and they were so loyal that there was a sense of personal injury that she was not given something worthy her magnetic charms. Little Toy had the audience immediately. While only a tot of five, all lines were given distinctly and with much bravery, yet the infantile witchery was always retained. The other children were not so artlessly pleasing in untaught and natural spontaneity. Alfred Hudson was cleverly droll as the huge piper, who is the children's pet, even when hopelessly befuddled. Louise Mackintosh was the peppery tempered aunt of beauty and highbred finish, and played with that reliable skill and artistic finish that make her a corner stone of strength to any cast. Esther Lyon was another of the carefully selected ones who reflected credit on whoever picked out the artists to play fashionable folk. Blanche Moulton depicted the dowager duchess and pleased all with her droll delineation. Orme Caldara was the Irish leader who was supposed to get into trouble. If he had really been in trouble he could have carried it off in a way to win all matinee hearts, for he is a fine figure of a hero and has a pleasing manner, voice and good looks. Frank McDonald, George D. Parker, John Denton, and Edwin Clayton were members of the Fifteenth Dragoons. The unkind author gave them nothing worth while doing. It seemed a shame to leave soldierly men unemployed with either real comedy or some strong story. Robert Rogers contributed an oily vicar and by his skilled art made a short part stand out in a way not soon to be forgotten. The rest of the men and women fitted the picture of fashionable life excellently, and were no mismates to fine clothes and superb scenery.

Herald Square—Fritz in Tammany Hall.

Extravaganza in three acts by John J. McNally; lyrics and music by William Jerome and Jean Schwartz. Produced Oct. 16.

Fritz von Swobenfritz	Joseph Cawthorn
Pat McCann	Mark Hart
Bella McCann	Sue Stuart
Elena McCann	Alison Skipworth
J. Edward Corley	Julius M. Tannen
Charles Hart	Frank W. Shea
Lil McGrain	Ada Lewis
Susette Sorbonne	Neva Aymar
Alfred Hines	George Austin Moore
Millie Meyers	Suzanne Halpren
Grant Bellyne	Melville Ellis
Teddy Mullane	Charles MacDonald
Fergus O'Flaherty	Robert O'Connor
Tim Sullivan	Harry E. Valois
Slim Jim	Earl J. Benham
"Fatty" Dupois	Eli J. Brouillette
Mat McGregor	Charles Close
Bessie	Corinne Unsell
Tessie	Violet Barnes
Letty	Alva Holland
Betty	Beryle Dare
Pincus	P. Lebosky
Waiter	Eugene Roder
Mrs. Hart-Judson	Stella Mayhew

The state of uttermost debility and senile exhaustion to which "comic opera" has collapsed on Broadway is finely shown by this case of Fritz. All the marks of the lost, drop-jawed, vacant-eyed dribbling of idiotic brain softening are in the so-called book of this thing the programme impudently calls a "musical play." No microscope is strong enough to find any red corpuscles of the real blood of playmaking in the stuff that flows sluggishly through its drainage system. These have been carefully gathered from the dish washings of all former feasts that have been enjoyed for the last ten years and served again in the hope that the costliness of the plate and the charm of the servers would deceive the public. If the price tag and costly settings could make every bit of paste a diamond rivers would be running glue and every carpenter's wife a scintillating wonder.

Joseph Cawthorn appeared at the head of a cast that would be difficult to reproduce in beauty of womanhood, charm of childhood or general brilliancy of talent. He conquered in spite of the lines he was given to utter, and scored by the magnetism and urbanity of a real comedian. In this he is a German baker, to whose arms a rich widow goes at eleven o'clock. His songs were artistically rendered, with unusual art in restrained acting, and in spite of pun-shredded English he won the hearts of his thinly scattered audience. His work with a concertina that he finds amid the marbled and gilt pillars of Tammany Hall was as musically artistic and popular as it has always been. Splendor dimmed none of his specialties or remarkable talents. Mark Hart was cleverly funny as an Irish politician who has married a fashionable wife. Alison Skipworth lent her beauty, skill and thoroughbred way of wearing handsome gowns to the part of his second wife. Sue Stuart was charming and pretty as the daughter of Pat. Julius M. Tannen was so easy and reposeful as a feeder to the Dutchman and Irishman his admirers regretted room was not made for some of his artistic and well-known imitations. Ada Lewis wandered on and off too seldom. Her characterization of a manicure lady added another to her gathering of East Side types and is a worthy successor to those famous tough girls. Her song with chorus, "East Side Lil," was heartily encored. Pretty Neva Aymar gave distinctive character to a soubrette type and was well liked in her song. George Austin Moore had a song with chorus that would have been a whistling hit if Edna May had not sung it first in her famous little canoe. Suzanne Halpren was beautiful to behold, but could not be heard. Melville Ellis rendered his small part with attractive dash and good comedy effect. Robert O'Connor was highly liked as a typical cop of "The Finest." Harry Valois was excellent in the bit of a newsboy. Eli J. Brouillette made an instant hit as a fresh kid who is looking for his lost father. Stella Mayhew added more fame to her thickly laureled crown. Her songs, "When You're in Love," "I'm a Woman of Importance," and her work in the trio "Yankee Doodle Boodle" with Mr. Hart and Mr. Cawthorn delighted and won many deserved encores.

Only the short second act went with that snap and quick beat that is the spirit and life of what this ambitious production strives to be. This was due much to the clever brains of those skilled stage-managers, Herbert Gresham and Ned Wayburn, and the fact that it was short enough not to be wearisome like the others. They introduced a droll song with real dolls, made the most of by fourteen clever children and forty of the prettiest chorus girls seen in a long time—in a police parade that made those in front wake up and take notice. It was appropriate to the subject and free from the mere Swedish movements too often seen in some recent work with crowds. One of the worst stupidities of the many during the evening was the placing of the first act in front of Cooper Union. It may interest the far distant regions whose inhabitants patronize the sightseeing coaches to see a photographic scene drop painted to look like an unattractive brick building of New York, but it only bores those who are bored every day by the same hideous structure.

West End—The Sambo Girl.

Musical comedy in two acts. Book by Harry B. Smith; score by Gustave Kerker. Produced Oct. 16.

Raphael Rubens	Melville A. Collins
Henri Du Pont	George K. Henery
Willie Runabout	Harry Lane
Angelo Martini	Arthur O'Keefe
Celeste	Marie Gribben
Madame Martini	Florence Morrison
Carlotta Dashington	Eva Tanguay

A year or two ago The Blonde in Black proved either too much or too little for Blanche Ring and they separated early. Eva Tanguay, grappling the same play under a new title, seems to have secured a hold on it that will not be easily broken. The not particularly strong book and music are almost entirely lost in the restlessness of the new star, and if her nerves hold out these adjuncts to the piece may become altogether unnecessary. The audience at the first New York night soon forgot that the scenery showed signs of long use or long storage; they did not mind if the West End orchestra was unable to keep the pace set for it or if the other members of the cast looked disconsolate and alone so long as Miss Tanguay sparkled and danced and made a noise like singing. She changed her gown twelve times, which is a feat worth note when the construction of her gowns is considered. At the end of the first act she received flowers and made a speech.

The plot of The Sambo Girl is the same as that of The Blonde in Black, though the names of the characters have been changed. Henri Du Pont, a Parisian dressmaker and conductor of a matrimonial agency with an insurance feature, is about to lose 50,000 francs because the wife of one of his customers persists in flirting with other men before the policy insuring against flirting has expired. The Sambo Girl, who instructs pupils in the cakewalk, agrees to flirt with the husband in order to make the wife jealous. Raphael Rubens, a young artist, is in love with the Sambo Girl, and the time not occupied with the troubles of Du Pont and the singing and dancing is used for love scenes. Just how it ends is undetermined. Even this much of the plot is clear only after quiet analysis.

Miss Tanguay as Carlotta, the Sambo girl, so dominated the whole thing that it is hard to say what her work was like. Her first song, "I Don't Care," was a sort of index to her hair, eyes, face, figure and character, in which she confided to the audience that she did not care what they thought about her looks. "I'm for You," of which Melville S. Collins acknowledges authorship, was another confidential song where the spot light helped a great deal. "The Banjo Serenade," in which Miss Tanguay was assisted by the chorus dressed as children, received much applause, and "Eva Tanguay's Love Song," also by Mr. Collins, got the whole audience to humming. Her drinking song, with the assistance of Mr. Collins and George K. Henery, was the biggest hit. Miss Tanguay soaked her hair with champagne and probably ruined her dress during its progress.

The support did well. Melville S. Collins as Raphael Rubens sang one of his own songs, "I'm a Bohemian," and interested the audience with some piano music. George K. Henery as Henri Du Pont worked to keep up with Miss Tanguay and stood a good many hard falls. Harry Lane, in the role of Willie Runabout, was fair in his comedy work and sang a toreador song so well that the audience wished he would sing again. Arthur O'Keefe as Angelo Martini, a ballet master, was agile and athletic and appeared to be able to dance. Marie Gribben, who played Celeste Du Pont, sang well—much better than she spoke or acted. The three numbers given her were heartily encored. Florence Morrison as Madame Martini, she circus queen with aspirations for grand opera, did the best character work in the piece, playing a burlesque part with just enough seriousness to give it value. The small chorus was well dressed and sang fairly, though hardly loud enough.

Miss Tanguay and her Sambo Girl are not good enough for Broadway perhaps, but they do not bore one and out of the city they should find much favor. This week, In New York Town.

Belasco—Du Barry.

David Belasco revived Du Barry last week for fourteen performances with all the sumptuousness that marked the first production of the piece. As was the case in the revivals of Adrea and Zaza, Mrs. Carter showed that she had continued the study of the role and put into it increased vigor. Her support, almost entirely changed since the first production, also met with the approval of large audiences. Charles A. Stevenson was seen again in the role of Louis XV, the character that he originated. Leonard Cooper again played the Duc d'Aiguillon, and W. T. Bune, H. G. Carlton, and Eleanor Stuart appeared in their original roles. The cast:

Louis XV	Charles A. Stevenson
Comte Jean Du Barry	Francis Powers
Comte Guillaume	Fred Bamford
Duc de Brissac	Herbert Millward
Cosse-Brissac	Charles A. Millward
The Papal Nuncio	Tefft Johnson
Duc de Richelieu	Harold Howard
Maupeou	H. G. Carlton
Terray	Marshall Welch
Duc d'Aiguillon	Leonard Cooper
Denys	Frank Westerton
Lebel	George Harcourt
M. Labille	Gilmore Scott
Vaubernier	James Linhardt
Scalo	J. D. Jones
Zamore	Frankie De Gee
Flute player	A. Joly
Valroy	William Shay
D'Altaire	Edward Brown
De Courcel	H. F. Koser
La Garde	W. T. Bune
Fontenelle	F. H. Evans
Renard	Charles Wright
Citizen Greive	J. W. Carroll
Marac	Ernest Dale
Denisot	H. G. Carlton
Tavernier	Lydian Durrett
Gomard	J. A. Butler
Hortense	Maria Davis
Manon	Belle De Gee
Julie	Grace Noble
Leonie	Hazel Neason
Nichette	Zara Delaro
Juliette	Marion Seeley
Marquise de Quesnoy	Lizzie Conway
Sophie Arnauld	Calla Roberts
The gypsy hag	Miss Davis
Mademoiselle Le Grand	Bertha Carlile
Mademoiselle Guimard	Eleanor Stuart
Madame La Dauphine	Edna Griffin
Marquise de Crenay	Corah Adams
Duchesse d'Aiguillon	Amie White
Princess Alixe	Miss Leonard
Duchesse de Choisy	Sadie Tillotson
Marquise de Langers	Florence Neason
Comtesse de Marsan	Lillian Sanborn
Sophie	Laura Osborn
Rosalie	Miss Adams
Cerisette	Estelle Porter
Jeanette Vaubernier	Mrs. Leslie Carter

At Other Playhouses.

FOURTEENTH STREET.—Nancy Brown, with that dainty little comedienne, Mary Marble, in Marie Cahill's old part, aroused much enthusiasm at the Fourteenth Street Theatre last week. The piece has lost no whit of snappiness in its career on the road, and aided by the fact that the company was possessed of singing ability unusual in organizations of its class it met with decided success. Mary Marble in the title-role revealed a piquant humor united with a vivacity and go that brought chuckles from all parts of the house all the time she was on the stage. The two songs which she sang and a trio in which she was assisted by William C. Mandeville and Robert Harty provoked many encores. Mr. Mandeville's make-up as the Bey of Ballyhoo was good and several times he almost became funny. The same might also be said of Ben Lodge as Socrates Finis. Osborne Clemson as Mara Mustapha flourished his sword in the manner usually affected by musical comedy princes, while Robert Harty as Noah Little was amusing and won favor with his song "Making Eyes," in which he was assisted by a chorus of four young women who danced like veritable bacchantes. Of the four noblemen David Andrada as the Englishman was the best, with Frank Craven as the Frenchman a close second. The Russian and the German were played by E. W. Lewis and Johnny Johnson, respectively, and Rose Barnet was Princess Barboo. Florrie Clements as Muriel was most acceptable and her duets with Mr. Andrada were sung in a good soprano. A drinking song by William McGirr showed him to be possessed of a voice and manner worthy of something better than a place in the chorus. This week, The Curse of Drink.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE.—The Banker's Daughter was revived last week and Frances Starr walked off with the honors by her extremely interesting performance of Lillian Westbrook. Amelia Bingham and Isabelle Evesson alternated in the role of Mrs. Brown and both gave good accounts of themselves. Charles Richman as John Strebelow, Harold Hartsell as Laurence Westbrook, Charles Abbe as Phipps, J. H. Gilmour as Harold Routledge, Gerald Griffin as Mr. Babbage, and the other members of the stock company acquitted themselves creditably. The prices were reduced last week and the result was an increased attendance. This week's attraction is The School for Scandal.

JOE WEBER'S THEATRE.—Margaret Pitt has succeeded Grace Kimball in the important role of Princess Alice in The Prince Chap. She has beauty, charm and a vibrantly thrilling voice of musical quality. This piece contributes unusually to the higher pleasure of those cultured people who prefer the best in dramatic art. Mr. Lawrence has made arrangements to fill time every year at this house with a dramatic season while Mr. Weber takes his musical organization on the road. Last week witnessed the celebration of the fiftieth performance of this charming play.

MURRAY HILL.—At the Murray Hill Theatre last week P. Aug. Anderson repeated his fine impersonation of the leading role in Charles E. Blaney's The Curse of Drink, recently seen at the New Star. Prominent in his support were Henry P. Nelson, William Clifton, Ogden Wight, Harry Winfield, Baby Minerva, and Blanche Shirley. Others who appeared were George W. Kerk, Nell Florence, the Electric Comedy Four, Herman H. Gross, Roy L. Baker, and Esmer Cornwall. This week the Russell Brothers in The Great Jewel Robbery.

PROCTOR'S 125TH STREET.—The Still Alarm proved a big drawing card last week and suited the patrons to a dot. The production was adequate in every way, the engine house scene being especially good. William J. Kelley as Jack Manley, Paul McAllister as John Bird, Sol Aiken as Doc Wilbur, James E. Wilson as Franklyn Fordham, Beatrice Morgan as Eleanor Fordham, and Agnes Scott as Cad Wilbur shared in the applause. The olio included Stuart Barnes, Marie Laurent, and Les Zamacois. This week's attraction is The Climbers.

GARRICK.—Arnold Daly has decided to replace John Bull's Other Island soon with Bernard Shaw's play, Mrs. Warren's Profession, for an indefinite run, beginning on Oct. 30. It is his intention to use John Bull's Other Island on his road tour. He will not abandon it entirely, in spite of its doubtful reception in New York. Mary Shaw will play the role of Mrs. Warren in the coming production. Among the other members of the company, besides Mr. Daly, will be Messrs. Findlay, Farren, and Tyler, and Chrystal Herne. The house is dark this week.

STAR.—The Queen of the Highbinders, Paul Siomer's exciting melodrama, drew crowded houses at the Star Theatre last week. In the cast were George E. Whitaker, Morris Burr, C. W. Travers, Louis Hartman, Paul Burns, Phillip Carroll, Percy Smith, Samuel Reid, Walter Britton, William E. Thomas, Harry Williams, John A. Laurence, Lorna Elliott, Leila E. Davis, and Sadie Fields. This week, The Way of the Transgressor.

THIRD AVENUE.—Fighting Fate, with Anna Blancke as Larry Stewart, played to good business at the Third Avenue Theatre last week. Jessie Mae Hall in The Street Singer opened a week's engagement last night.

YORKVILLE.—The Yorkville Theatre Stock company appeared in The Sign of the Four last week, with Eugene Moore as Sherlock Holmes and Mabel Montgomery in the leading female role. This week, The Two Orphans.

METROPOLIS.—Marching Through Georgia, which had its premiere at another New York house a few weeks ago, was the bill at the Metropolis Theatre last week. This week, A Rocky Road to Dublin.

LEW FIELDS'.—Blanche Ring's place in It Happened in Nordland at Lew Fields' Theatre last week was taken by Paulina Frederick and in the burlesque of The Music Master by Georgia Laurence.

THALIA.—Shadows of a Great City pleased large audiences at the Thalia Theatre last week, with Sadie Connelly at the head of the company. This week's bill, For His Brother's Crime.

AMERICAN.—My Tom-Boy Girl, with Lottie Williams, was a pleasing attraction at the American Theatre last week. This week's bill, Eva Tanguay in The Sambo Girl.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—Raymond Hitchcock in Easy Dawson played to good attendance at the Harlem Opera House last week. This week The Prodigal Son is the attraction.

PRINCESS.—The Thursday matinees of Zira, at the Princess Theatre, have been discontinued, owing to the strain on Margaret Anglin. At the evening performance last Thursday Miss Anglin fainted three times.

JEROME K. JEROME LECTURES.

Before a good audience Jerome K. Jerome made his first American appearance as a story teller and reader on the afternoon of Oct. 17 at the Empire Theatre, New York. His seriousness of countenance and deliberateness of action helped much toward the effect of his efforts and the appreciation of his humor, that has been so popular in this country when delivered via his books and plays. The portion of his gray hair that is not missing is parted in the middle and bunched over his ears, around a close shaven, rosaate but almost clerical countenance that surmounts a rather stocky body. The listeners enjoyed hearing his natural reading of his work and effortless telling of anecdotes. Altogether it was a mildly pleasant and harmless afternoon. The best thing Mr. Jerome said was: "I have met thousands of American wives in Europe, all of them delightful women. I cannot understand why your American husbands do not sell out their businesses and go to Europe to renew old acquaintances with them."

ACTRESS SHOT BY ADMIRER.

A strange tragedy occurred during the performance at the Eldora Theatre, Nantes, France, recently, when a lieutenant of infantry murdered one of the actresses by shooting her through the head with a revolver. The victim, Rose Noel, who was only twenty-two years of age, had lately received several letters from the lieutenant warning her of his intention to kill her if she persisted in rejecting his advances. For fully an hour after the tragedy the murderer kept an enraged crowd at bay with his revolver, and at last declared that he would submit to arrest if he could be allowed to gaze once more upon the face of the woman he adored. The privilege was granted, and the lieutenant, bursting into tears and sobbing loudly, suddenly placed the revolver to his head, but the bystanders knocked his arm at the moment and the bullet buried itself in the ceiling. The officer is in custody, in a state bordering on insanity.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Jack Yount and Pearl Havlin, for Human Hearts, Western.

Charles Halton, by Frank Perley, for character comedy part in The Winning Girl.

Jane Stuart, for ingenue in Monsieur Beaucaire.

H. S. Daniels, as business manager of The College Widow, Western.

Marinion Stone, by Ollie Mack, for Hoity Toity.

IN OTHER CITIES.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Eleanor Robson in Merely Mary Ann is the hit of the week at the Columbia 9-16. San Franciscans have always been interested in her theatrical successes for the reason that she first appeared on any stage in this city, seemingly only a few years ago. Miss Robson has now come to us as a full fledged star, and her reception on Monday night was an ovation. The play will go all next week. On Thursday, 12, Miss Robson gave a matinee performance of Browning's In a Balcony to a large and interested audience.

The Alcazar's new co. appeared in What Happened to Jones this week, 9-16. This clever comedy has been seen here many times, and has always proven as successful as it did on Monday night at this house. Lenore Kerwin, the new ingenue, was the hit of the performance as the Swedish slavey, her make-up being an artistic conception. Mr. Waldron as Jones appeared to good advantage. Miss Moore gave an intelligent performance. Mr. Maher was very funny, and the balance of the cast was excellent. Next week, The Crisis, which affords Miss Moore the best opportunity she has had this season. Miss Waldron should be very attractive in the play.

Sam Devere's Burlesquers at the California 9-16 put on a very good performance. The two funny farces introduced some clever singing and dancing. The girls are pretty and sing well. Next week, May Howard's Big Show comes, and will surely prove a great drawing card.

The Tivoli Opera House is having nothing but success with its grand opera season. This week's operas, 9-16, were all given to packed houses. Madame Tetrazzini gave two performances of Somnambula with marked success, one of Traviata and one of Barber of Seville. Salassa was the feature of the Pagliacci performance, and Salasse's great triumph came on Friday and Saturday night in Otello. Gregoretti did fine work in The Barber. Next week, Alice Gilman, a native daughter, just returned from Europe, will make her first appearance in Carmen. The other operas will be repetitions.

At the Majestic 9-16 Barney Bernard was seen in the rattling good comedy, Humbug. Mr. Bernard quite surprised his friends in his fine portrayal of the role, one which was entirely new to him. The co. did excellent work, and rendered valuable support. This is Mr. Bernard's last week with the co. He is to go East soon to play an important role in a New York production. Next week, The Neills in Janice Meredith.

It was yesterday announced that Mr. Bishop, of the Majestic Theatre, and the Liberty Playhouse in Oakland, had obtained the lease of the Central Theatre, so long under the management of the Belasco and Mayer. It is understood that a lawsuit will be the result of the change.

The Grand Opera House has a great card in the clever performance of The Sultan of Sulu 9-16. The houses have been packed to the doors, and the players have all received individual praise. Albert Maher, the comedian, who appears as the Sultan, is not much of a comedy singer, but his work is excellent. Harriett Sheldon as the up-to-date girl is a character well drawn, and the work of Nellie Nichols as Chiquita is one of the very bright spots in the performance. Next week, In Old Kentucky.

The famous Kentucky melodrama, The Whitecaps, was the bill at the Central 9-16. This startling play is by Owen Hall, and is a real thriller. Hershall Mayall has a role that gives him opportunity for courageous action, and he is never better than when in such roles. Miss Elsmere, who has become a great favorite at this house, was also seen in a pleasing role. Shumer was a prime villain, and was given a big hand upon his appearance, as he had been recently loaned to the Alcazar to play an important role. The scenic effects were marvelous. The co. was good. Next week, Tracked Around the World.

Alfred Metzger, the editor of the San Francisco "Musical Review," is monthly writing a very interesting continued article on "Music and Theatricals of Forty Years Ago in San Francisco." His paper is greatly in demand, for his interesting criticisms are unbiased and praise is given where it is due.

OSCAR SIDNEY FRANK.

MILWAUKEE.

The Alhambra was well filled with a thoroughly satisfied audience 15, the attraction being My Wife's Family, a bright musical comedy interpreted by a clever co. with numerous vaudeville features introduced. Judging from the applause which greeted the performance, it bids fair to enjoy a successful run. Arthur Dunn and Frank Beamish ensayed the principal roles, in which they were ably assisted by Minnie May Thompson, George Gale, Maidie Wemsley, Lillian Northrube, Tom Linton, Mabel Gray, and the Dorothea Sisters. I. O. U. 22-28.

The Belle of the West was the current attraction at the Bijou, opening 15 to a big house. The performance was well worth seeing, and elicited hearty applause. The production is a combination of musical comedy and melodrama. It is splendidly staged, and a strong cast headed by Florence Bindley did full justice to the work, which tested the versatility of the players to the utmost. Miss Bindley scored a gratifying hit, and excellent work was offered by Jack Henderson, Joseph Greene, Joseph Herbert, Jr., the two Powers, Marion Littlefield, George 2. Jackson, and Harriette Keyes. Joe Welch in The Peddler 22-28.

The Thanhouser co. scored another marked success at the Academy 15 in Pretty Peggy, which afforded the charming leading woman of the co. an opportunity of which she took full advantage, and taxed the efforts of the other members of the co. to no small degree. Evelyn Vaughan cannot be too highly praised for her admirable conception of the title-role. The other parts were all well handled, Edgar Ranne making a handsome and pleasing David Garrick, and excellent portrayals being offered by A. H. Van Buren, Joseph Dailey, R. Sheldon Lewis, De Witt Jennings, Corinne Cantwell, Mable Carruthers, Eugenie Dubois, Rodney Ranous, Josephine Janechek, and Emma Smith. The play was prettily staged and much enjoyed by a large audience. The Pillars of Society 22-28.

The Sho-Gun was again seen and enjoyed at the Davidson by a large number of musical-comedy lovers 15. The performance was satisfactory in all respects, and the piece was handsomely staged. John E. Henshaw, of course, was applauded to the echo. In the well chosen cast praiseworthy renditions were given by Thomas C. Leary, Agnes Caine Brown, Isabelle D'Armond, Genevieve Day, Douglas Ruthven, and May Tewbrook. A well trained chorus, good to look upon, did a large share of the work, and the costumes and other accessories were fully up to the standard formerly set. The School Girl 19-21. Francis Wilson 22-28.

An exceptionally large and appreciative audience witnessed the first musical production at the Pabst Theatre this season 15, when Die Durchgaenger (The Runaways) was presented by the Wachsner Stock co. in an artistic and thoroughly enjoyable manner. The book was written by Berthold Sherotta, a member of the German Stock co., and the music is by Eduard Klueppel. The performance was a great success, and the piece made a most favorable impression. Burton Holmes continued his annual lecture series at the Pabst 17 before a crowded house. The Geezer of Geck will be the attraction 19-21.

Edgar Ranne has resigned his position as leading man of the Thanhouser co. to accept a like engagement with the Grand Opera House Stock co., New Orleans. The announcement of Mr. Ranne's departure caused the most sincere regret among all classes of theatregoers here, his popularity during his long engagement under Manager Thanhouser in Milwaukee having been earned by conscientious study and unremitting effort to please. It can truthfully be said that no actor having occupied a similar position in this city ever won so many genuine friends. A. H. Van Buren will succeed Mr. Ranne as leading man.

CLAUDE L. N. NORRIS.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The event of the week, theatrically speaking, was the splendid reception accorded Florence Roberts at the Marquam Grand 12 upon the initial production of the new play, Ann Lamont, with the following cast: Lillian Armsby, Whitney; Max Figman, Grant Dudley; Robert McWade, R. Stonedge Smythe; Norah Lamison, Rose Masters; William Thomas, Gorsscople; Florence Roberts, Ann Lamont; Lucile Yorke, Claire Lamont; H. S. Northrup, Leon Richmond; Florence Robinson, Mrs. Lawrence; David Young, John Masters; Lucius Henderson, Gordon Titus; Mercedia Esmonde, Louise Lamphere; Clifford Leigh, Lord Ashley; W. R. Spencer, Hawkins; Wilbur Hudson, Landon. No more enthusiastic and friendly audience could have been gathered together to encourage any artist than this occasion afforded, and the many outbursts of acclamation were as hearty as the admiration of this Pacific Coast favorite is sincere. In Old Kentucky opened the week at the Marquam, and, as of old, scored a big financial success; the principals during this visit were Frank Dayton, H. Bradley, George Mitchell, Marion Shirley, Alice Walker and May Anderson. The Tenderfoot comes to this house 16-18, to be followed by Ben Hur 19-25.

The Fortunes of the King 9-15 was the bill at the Belasco, and made money for the managers as well as reputation for the members of the co. White Whittlesey made his first appearance at this theatre with this co., and it is not too much to say that he at once made a place for himself as a bright particular star among romantic actors. In the role of Jane Lane, Lillian Lawrence could not have chosen a better dramatic vehicle to present her many sided ability. The critics report her truly as winsome, intelligent and artistic. John Sainpolis in the heavy and Clarence Montaine and Frederick Sumner, of the supporting cast, were particularly good. Sheridan or The Maid of Bath will be the attraction for the week commencing 16.

The May Howard Burlesque co., in Mademoiselle Fi Fi and The Rounders, made a merry week at the Baker, and kept up the record of house-filling performances that has obtained at this house all this season. Next week The Star Show Girls.

Uncle Josh Perkins was the "rube" show at the Empire 9-14 and did a heavy business with the gallery. Not the least attractive part of the performance were the antics of the street band, given daily. Next week, beginning 15, Honest Hearts.

The Lewis and Clark Fair closed in a blaze of glory 14. Unlike some of the great fairs of more pretentious cities, this exposition will close with a handsome balance on hand and all debts paid to date. The small towns of the Northwest will now be experiencing an avalanche of trail performances wending their way Eastward.

JOHN F. LOGAN.

COLUMBUS.

In connection with the statement made in this column some few weeks ago, that in all probability Columbus would soon have a burlesque house, the occasion is now propitious to announce the fact that contracts have been signed by and between the theatrical firm of Burt, Weber and Wood and Lincoln Fritter, of this city, for the construction of a concrete theatre building on West Broad street, to cost not less than $125,000. J. M. Brown, representing the firm, was in this city for several days nearly a week ago and it was at that time that arrangements were completed. F. H. Johnston is the architect selected to plan the building, which will be a model of beauty and being entirely of concrete will pose as a distinct novelty, there at this time being only three or four theatre buildings in the country composed of this material. Burlesque and musical shows of a high quality will be played and the house is to be ready for the first attraction by August 20 next.

The Genius and the Model, with W. G. Stewart and Edna Goodrich, was the attraction at the Southern 17, 18. The piece is in its first week and with some pruning will score. Henry Woodruff was well cast and played with his usual power and excellence. John Blair in Winston Churchill's The Crossing is booked for three performances commencing 20.

The Altar of Friendship was revived at the popular Empire this week, with Frank Camp and Myrtle May playing opposite leads. Mr. Camp revealed his versatility in rendering his conception totally different from the version of his predecessor and acted Richard Arbuthnot with well directed distinction. Miss May has established herself a popular favorite and throws herself into her work with enthusiasm. Miss Laache played the tearful, wronged girl and demonstrated quite an ability in a part entirely foreign to her line. The occasion was particularly notable inasmuch as it was the first appearance of Margaret Kenmare, who established herself at once in an emotional role. The women who have preceded her have been a little short when it came to dealing with one's tear-stops.

The Eye Witness and One of the Many filled out the week at the High Street and drew good business throughout. Mabel McKinley in The Parson's Wife finished a three days' engagement at the Grand Wednesday 18.

Cecil Fanning, who is Columbus' favorite baritone soloist, will shortly be heard in recital, assisted by Wanda Follett Granger, with Harry Brown Turpin at the piano. Mr. Fanning, accompanied by his teacher, Mr. Turpin, sang at a number of important events in the East during the Summer and the occasion of each appearance became almost an ovation.

JOSEPH R. HAGUE.

INDIANAPOLIS.

It is doubtful if a better play will fall to our lot this season than The Squaw Man, presented by William Faversham at English's for three performances 12, 14 to large, fashionable and delighted audiences. The Land of Nod, with a bunch of pretty chorus girls, a good co. headed by that clever originator of parts, William Norris, opened a three days' engagement at the same theatre 16, to a large audience that showed its satisfaction by generous applause. The saxaphone speciality, given by Knox Wilson, was one of the big hits, as was the work of the Madcap Ballet, seen here before in vaudeville. Walter Stanton as the Giant Rooster in his fight with a game cock was very funny. William Norris, Tom Armstrong, Alice Dovey, Olive Vail, and Beatrice Mackenzie were strong favorites. The best of the musical numbers, which are not particularly pretty or catchy, are The Same Old Moon, Bonnie, and My Cinderella. The stage settings were attractive. Hara Kendall in The Barnstormer 20, 21. The Crossing 22-25. Alice Fischer 26. Thomas Rose 27, 28. Frank Daniels 30, 31.

Her Wedding Day, presented by a capable co., including Grace Hopkins, Jessie Lassing, Elberta Roy, Daisy Chaplin, William H. Clark, Harry S. Sheldon, Alexander G. Carlton, Frederick Maynard, and David Davis was the attraction at the Park 13-14. Lovers and Lunatics 16-18. The Millionaire Detective 19-21. Confessions of a Wife 23-25.

East Lynne is the attraction at the Indiana the current week.

Friends of J. Sherrie Mathews, formerly of the team of Mathews and Bulger, are starting a sick benefit fund for him. Plans are also on foot for a big ball in Tomlinson Hall at a date to be arranged later for his benefit. Mr. Mathews has been in Indianapolis with relatives for three years. Charles Zimmerman, manager of the Empire of this city, has been made trustee of the fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Koster, of this city, have gone into vaudeville. They opened their season in Minneapolis last week. Both are well-known musicians here, Mr. Koster being a violinist of some note and Mrs. Koster an organist, pianist and singer. They are playing under the name of the Calbulas.

Ida Brooks Hunt, who sang the leading role in Woodland last season, is spending three weeks with her husband, Dr. George Hunt, at his home in this city.

Hamilton Coleman, stage-manager, and Lena Shaw, one of the chorus girls of The Land of Nod co., were married 16.

PEARL KIRKWOOD.

KANSAS CITY.

The big event in the amusement world in Kansas City the week of 16-21 was the eleventh annual Horse Show, which was held, as usual, in Convention Hall. This season's event brought together the finest specimens of the horse family ever exhibited in our city, which in itself is saying a great deal, as former shows here have ranked with the best in the country.

Home Folks, as presented by an excellent co. at the Willis Wood 15-21, deserved better patronage than it received, the Horse Show, however, proving a stronger attraction for the amusement seeking public. Edwin Arden headed the cast of very capable people, who presented the play, and deserves great praise for his forceful impersonation of a character that might have been easily overdone. Archie Boyd was responsible for much of the comedy, while Arthur C. Sanders, Mary Ryan, Kate Lester, and Mabel Brownell also deserve praise. Frank Daniels 15-21. Tim Murphy 22-28. Walker Whiteside 29-28.

Lew Dockstader appeared at the Grand 15-21, and as might be expected was a great favorite here, and played to large audiences. The show this season is even better than ever, while the co. includes many of the old favorites. The Filibuster 22-28.

A Wife's Secret opened to two big audiences at the Auditorium 15, and business will doubtless be good throughout the week. A capable co. presented the play in a most satisfactory manner and was much applause. Shadows on the Hearth 22-28.

The Gillis Theatre, which is the acknowledged home of the melodrama in Kansas City, had a gay old city the week of 15-21 when Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World held the boards at the house. The piece, which comes very near being a musical comedy, was a most popular attraction and played to good business. Gus Bruno played the title-role, and caused no end of amusement, while the supporting co. proved very satisfactory. Young Buffalo, King of the Wild West, 22-28.

During Emma Eames' short stop here on her way to San Francisco she requested the press to announce that she would allow the public to choose the selections for her concert at her forthcoming engagement Nov. 10 in Convention Hall. She seemed very much pleased at the prospect of singing in the big auditorium.

Babes in the Wood, the first of the theatrical attractions to be seen in Convention Hall, will be seen here some time in November.

D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

LOS ANGELES.

The event that has attracted the most attention in theatrical circles for many a moon past was the benefit for the sick actor, Thomas Oberle, which took place on Tuesday, Oct. 10, at the Belasco Theatre. Every one admired Tom and had a warm spot in his heart for the unfortunate man. The Orpheum, Burbank, Grand Opera House and Belasco forces were right to the front with the best they could offer, and in addition Lillian Burkhart, Max Heinrich and Mackenzie Gordon, the famous English tenor, contributed, and concluding, the third act of Old Heidelberg was put on, with Oberle himself appearing as Lutz. This was the climax, and at this point a tremendous ovation was tendered the actor. The audience shouted, whistled, cheered and showered the stage with flowers. After silence had been restored the sick man came to the front and made these few remarks in a sadly hoarse voice: "There's nothing for me to say, and, besides, you couldn't hear me if I said it. May God bless you, and thank you each and every one." Over $2000 was netted, and Mr. Oberle has left and will be for the present on a ranch about thirty miles from Phoenix, Ariz.

The Mason has been dark 9-14, but for the coming week Ethel Barrymore in Sunday 16-18 and The Girl from Kay's 19-21.

At Morosco's the patrons had the pleasure of a double bill 8-14 in the shape of Three Men in a Flat and The Great Interrogation. These two plays offered splendid entertainment, and the sincere work of Harry Duffi and Mr. Desmond, as well as the Indian character parts of Phoss McAllister and Jane Kolton, deserve special praise. Next week The Forbidden Marriage will be the bill.

Audrey at Belasco's 9-15 served to draw the regular patronage and this excellent co. did its best to make much out of the play. A Fool and His Money will be the play 16-22.

The Grand offered a melodrama 8-14 under the name of Escaped from the Harem, and of course any such sounding title would prove a big drawing card for a certain class of people. Queen of the Highway 15-21.

Out at the Chutes Chiffarelli's splendid band is rendering daily concerts both afternoon and evening to admirers of high-class music.

Paine's Last Days of Pompeii has been running during the past week at Prager Park and the attendance has been enormous.

DON W. CARLTON.

PROVIDENCE.

At the Imperial 16-21 the Imperial Stock co. appeared in Mrs. Dane's Defense. It is an exceptionally strong play, and was presented in a pleasing manner. As Sir Daniel Carteret William Courtleigh was seen to advantage. It was a difficult part, but nevertheless he was at home and gave a very fine interpretation. Eugenie Hayden was effective as Mrs. Dane and J. Heron Miller as Lionel. Viola Burton as Janet, Katherine De Barry as Mrs. Bulson Porter, and Isabelle Abearn as Lady Eastney were well suited for their parts. Good business. Lord Chumley 23-28.

Again we had David Harum at the Empire 16-21, presented in the same fine manner by William H. Turner and a very good co. Mr. Turner was greeted by large audiences, and his portrayal of David was a delight to every one. Norma Winslow as Mary Blake, Gideon Burton as Zeke Swinney, Pliny F. Rutledge as Chet, C. H. Carlton as Dick Larrabee, and Effie Germon as Aunt Polly contributed much toward making the production enjoyable. Thomas E. Shea in repertoire 23-28.

The Tuesday afternoon performances at the Imperial will during the balance of the season be known as professional matinees.

An unusual departure will be taken by Managers Spitz and Nathanson at the Empire Theatre for the week before Christmas, when the Empire prices will be lowered for the first time, and James Kennedy, the popular comedian of the Empire Summer Stock co. of the last few years, will be seen at this house at Summer prices. At the close of the Summer season Mr. Kennedy went out with his own co. under the management of Spitz and Nathanson, and is reported as doing a very good business.

After the matinee 17 at the Imperial Eugenie Hayden held a reception on the stage to the ladies present. The guests were presented by Mr. Courtleigh, and Miss Hayden was assisted in receiving by the other members of the Imperial Stock co.

The Shamrock's Irish Band from Dublin, assisted by Lilya Powell, the Irish soprano, gave a sacred concert at the Empire Theatre evening 15 and drew a large house.

HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

MONTREAL.

Duke of Killiecrankie opened to a fair house 16. Owing to the canceling of Bertha Ang the theatre will be dark next week: Oct. 30-Nov. 4: The Prodigal Son.

Creston Clarke appeared at the Academy 16-21 in Beaucaire. This is Mr. Clarke's first visit to Montreal, but it is to be hoped that it will not be his last. He proved himself a finished actor and made a most favorable impression. The play was beautifully staged and costumed. Oct. 23-28: Mr. Hits and I.

Les Pauvres de Paris (The Streets of New York) was the bill at the Francais 16-21 and a good performance of this popular melodrama was given. Paul Cazeneuve appeared in his successful impersonation of Plantrose (Badger). In which he has before proved his capabilities. George Dase was very amusing as Piquet Fils and Madame Estelle Myriel made the most of Antoinette Bay. Some clever specialties were introduced, notably the singing of Charles Gauthier, and the fire scene was one of the most realistic ever put on the stage in Montreal. Oct. 23-28: Napoleon.

The company at the Nouveautes gave a fine performance of Monsieur and Barbara's Vie de Boheme 16-21. Helene Gaudy scored a big hit as Mimi. Mademoiselle Blondin was a charming Musette. M. Dumaine did capable work as Rodolfo, while Mesdames Prevost Delorme and Charlotan gave clever characterizations of Rodolfo's Bohemian friends. Oct. 23-28: La Prince Zilah, by Jules Claretie.

L'Enfant de Regiment made an interesting bill at the National. F. Leonhard gave a fine performance of Marechal Saxe and M. Hauterive was a capital Marquis de Rencourt. Francine Vasse as Julien, the child of the regiment, was all that could be desired. J. P. Filion as Jean Durand and Mademoiselle Bureau as his sweetheart, Pyrenine, looked after the comedy end of the play and Mademoiselle Vebry did good work as the persecuted Juliette. Oct. 23-28: Les Orphelins de Pont Notre-Dame.

The Alcazar Beauties gave a good show at the Royal. The Misses Rawtelle and Seven, Riley and Mathews, and Charles B. Wood are the chief features.

W. A. TREMAYNE.

NEW ORLEANS.

The management of the Greenwall Theatre presented the Transatlantic Extravaganza co. in the Pirates of Panama 16-21. The usual comical tactics that pervade musical comedies were in evidence and the many people in the co. labored hard to please. The girls, costumes, and scenery were fair to look at, while the singing and dancing were of a lively kind and the vaudeville features introduced during the play were of a high order. Among those who deserve mention are Fulgura, Warsaw Brothers, Leonard and Bennett, Reed and Wilson, Dancing Hall and Helen Parr, and Byron and Langdon. The one-act farce entitled The Ladies' Tonsorial Parlor was a side splitter and made a big hit. Good crowds were in attendance during the week. Santa-Santley co. 22-27.

Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall was the drawing card at the Grand Opera House 15-21, and both play and players scored successfully. Mary Nelson Hall in the title-role was the winsome and willful girl whom we recognize in the novel, and her charming personality added in a great measure to its success. Frank Sylvester played the leading part intelligently and Louis Morrison, Lillian Dix, Julia Booth, and Maurice Wilkinson were all up in their parts. The costumes and scenery were particularly attractive, and the play ran smoothly during the week. The Royal Box 22-28.

The Baldwin-Melville Stock co. at the Lyric Theatre presented The Holy City 15-21 to customary large business. The many splendid opportunities for scenic effects and gorgeous costumes were made the most of and the Biblical story was intelligently and beautifully told. Miss Thais Magrane, Lester Lonergan, John T. Dwyer, Thomas Findlay, L. O. Hart, Helen Ray and Ora Waldrop were prominent in the cast. M'liss 22-28.

The Glick Stock co. closed a one week engagement at the Elysium Theatre 15. The management announces that owing to quarantine regulations the theatre will remain dark until 22.

The Crescent Theatre, with Al. G. Fields as the attraction, opens 22.

J. MARSHALL QUINTERO.

BUFFALO.

Otis Skinner in His Grace de Grammont was at the Star 16-18, and while the play did not give him the opportunity as "the harvester," it pleased fair audiences. Of the support, the women of the cast were very good, especially the work of that sterling actress, Jennie A. Eustice. Marion Abbott also deserves special mention.

That inimitable comedian, Digby Bell, and an excellent supporting co. kept capacity houses in roars of laughter at the Star 19 20, presenting The Education of Mr. Pipp.

John and Emma Ray in Down the Pike did very well at the Teck week 16 and gave a fair performance. Next week, Mabel McKinley, and the advance sale is very large.

Every Irishman in Buffalo must have been at the Lyceum week 16, judging from the capacity houses. Robert Emmet, played by the Baldwin-Melville co., was the magnet, and it was the most ambitious undertaking of this co. All the parts were well cast, and the work of Jack Webster in the title-role stood out prominently. Edna Archer Crawford as Sarah Curran gave a sweet, sympathetic interpretation to the character.

Lillian Mortimer was seen in her latest play, No Mother to Guide Her, at the Academy week 16, and it proved to be a thriller from start to finish. Miss Mortimer was good, but same cannot be said of many in the co.

Harry Cullignon, a Buffalo boy and formerly a member of the Singing Four, was in town with The Rays as business-manager of the co.

Goff Phillips, comedian, has made the hit of his career with A Trip to Egypt co., playing one of the principal parts.

Robert Lacy was in town during the past week, having severed his connections with Klaw & Erlanger Strong co.

P. T. O'CONNOR.

NEWARK.

At the Empire 16-21 we are again favored with a new play. Ireland—1798, a historical comedy-drama in four acts, by C. and N. Jordan, had its initial production 16 and was greeted by a good-sized audience. The play scored an instantaneous and emphatic success. The company is a large, competent and capable one. Lloyd Bingham, the star of the occasion, was excellent. Following is the cast: Dermot Fitzgerald, Lloyd Bingham; Lord Castlereagh, A. S. Lipman; Hugh More, Joseph Allen; O'Neil, William Herbert; Larry Flynn, James Grant; Westcott, Harvey Cassidy; Pipa, F. X. Hennessy; Celia, Elizabeth Mercier; Lady Castlereagh, Lizzie Leigh; Molly, Lois Arnold. Sarah O'Neil, Maggie Breyer; Abbess, Katie Bruce; Nun, Ada Merserveau; Mrs. O'Grady, Betty Barlow; child, Clara Merserveau.

The Duchess of Dantzic is playing to big and delighted audiences at the Newark Theatre 16-21. Week Oct. 23-28: Raymond Hitchcock in Easy Dawson.

Audiences that tax the seating capacity of Blaney's are witnessing the performance of Eight Bells by the Byrne Brothers and their co. 16-21. Week Oct. 23-28: Queen of the Convicts.

The Way of the Transgressor, a four-act melodrama, in which are introduced ten acting dogs, is drawing well at the Columbia 16-21. A Runaway Boy 23-28. Hearts of Gold 30-Nov. 4.

A novel prize contest is a feature of the week at the Columbia. The prize will be a Landseer pup, reckoned as a cunty little piece of infantile caninity. Six of these pups were born recently to Hooper, one of the dogs taking part in The Way of the Transgressor, and one of them will be given away here. Every person attending the performance is given a number and at the end of the week there will be a drawing. The holder of the lucky number will become the owner of the dog.

JOSEPH F. HARRISON.

SEATTLE.

Ben Hur was the attraction at the Grand Opera House 9-14, and as upon the previous visit of this play it commanded the greatest of interest, and the house was sold out for every performance. The scenic equipment and production were up to the same standard as when seen here before, and the co. was very capable throughout. A novelty for those who had seen the play here before, when Alphons Ethier was cast as Messala, was his reappearance here in the part of Ben Hur. It must be said that he scored emphatic success in both of these parts, and one would scarcely undertake to say which was the better acted. Julius McVickar was very good as Messala. Robert McWade, Jr., as Simonides, Henry Weaver as Ilderim, Charles Rhoyl as Arrius, Mabel Mortimer as Esther, Dorothy Ransmore as Iras, and Averell W. Harris as Malluch may be credited with the best performances of the supporting co.

York State Folks 15-18. Madame Adelaide Herrmann 19-21. Florence Roberts 22-25. The Tenderfoot 26-28.

The Star Show Girls scored a hit with a packed house at the Seattle 8, and business was large throughout the week. The specialties were all good. The Jolly Grass Widows 15-21. Washington Society Girls 22-28.

Dora Thorne proved a very pleasing attraction at the Third Avenue 9-14, and drew large audiences. Charles Caulkins, George R. Robinson, and Cuba Nihlo headed a capable co. Why Women Sin 15-21. The Taylor-Curtis co. 22-28.

RODNEY D. WHITE.

SALT LAKE CITY.

The Salt Lake Theatre has had a full and good week, presenting The Tenderfoot 9, 10 to good business. Madame Herrmann afternoon and evening 11; light business. She gave us a very clever entertainment this season. The Four Trumpeters made a hit in their musical specialties. One of the few new things granted us, Peggy from Paris, was presented 12-14 to good business. The girls in this attraction are the best we have seen this season. The co., scenery and costumes are very good. Arthur Deagon was welcomed heartily. Olivette Haynes, a diminutive comedian, made a decided hit with her song "Henny." Julia West, Clara Martin, and Minnie Olton each made good friends.

At the Grand there was a treat to lovers of the tramp drama. A Ragged Hero 9-11 and A Thoroughbred Tramp 12-14 pleased good sized audiences.

The Lyric has a good attraction this week in the Ideals Extravaganza co., giving good vaudeville. Katherine Klare, Carrie Franklin, Frank O'Brien, Al. Grust, the Livingstone Family, and Clayton Frye were popular.

The Bon Ton, vaudeville house, now the only ten-twenty in town, has been drawing large and interested crowds.

The Utahna open air theatre succumbed to the cold weather 14 and henceforth only the dancing pavilion will be open until next Summer.

C. E. JOHNSON.

TOLEDO.

The Isle of Bong-Bong was the Valentine attraction 12. The attendance was fair and the chorus captured the house. It was the sprightliest, most energetic co. we have seen this season. John W. Ransone, the comedian, was badly handicapped by the narrowness of the role. John Hendricks and Alice York sang well, but the chorus was excellent. The Crossing drew very light houses 16, 17 and failed to please. The piece is tedious and talky. John Blair and Violet Houk were in the leads, the latter hardly equal to the task.

The Serio-Comic Governess was the Lyceum bill 12-14. Henry V. Donnelly and Nellie Beaumont assume the leading roles, it being Donnelly's first appearance here in a good many years. He is still a very nimble dancer. Miss Beaumont sings and dances in her usual pleasing manner. The Smart Set are always favorites in this city and their engagement 15-18 filled the house at every performance. Dudley, the comedian, is one of the best and Marion Smart is a handsome leading lady who can sing and dance. Another valuable addition to the co. is Ella Anderson who has a beautiful voice. Burts had Ole Olson with Ben Hendricks in the lead 12-14. Secret Service Sam proved to be what the patrons wanted 15-18, and the work of Charles T. Aldrich and co. more than pleased.

C. M. EDSON.

ST. PAUL.

Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots opened 5 for three nights at the Metropolitan and proved to be one of the best comedies presented here for some time. San Toy 8 pleased large audiences for four nights and returned 15 for one night. Frank Daniels came 12 and appeared to advantage in Sergeant Brue. Francis Wilson and capable co. opened 16 for three nights in Cousin Billy, and it proved to be a very neat little comedy. One of the younger artists, Angela Keir, made the hit of the piece. A one-act comedy followed the regular bill. Coming: Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch 19. Ethel Barrymore 23. Sho-Gun 26.

Joe Welch in The Peddler opened 8 at the Grand to very large business and pleased. His support was all that could be desired and the stage settings were very satisfactory. A Race for Life opened 15 for a week's stand and was greeted by a packed house. The play is above the average of melodramas, but has the usual race horse scene and the love story and all ends well. Austin Seymore, the ranch owner, was portrayed by Edwin Walter satisfactorily and John Hunter made a good villain. C. Blanche Rice was very clever as Jessie Seymore. The balance of the co. deserve credit for their work.

HARRY O. WILLIAMS.

OMAHA.

The Prince of Pilsen was the offering at the Boyd 12-14, with Jess Dandy carrying off the honors in the title-role. As usual, the piece was well patronized, and the co. met with a series of hearty receptions. Underlined Frank Daniels 17, 18. Piff! Paff! Pouf! 19-21. Home Folks 22-24.

At the Krug Sky Farm 12-14 opened to a fair house that thoroughly enjoyed this beautiful pastoral play. The co. is fine and the scenic effects excellent. Holty Toity 15, 16 drew a series of well filled houses, which showed hearty appreciation of the comedy work as well as of the beauty chorus. Manager Breed has Haverly's Minstrels 22, 23. Rajah of Bhong 24, 25. A Wife's Secret 26-28.

All the Comforts of Home is the offering at the Burwood week of 15, and at least 200 applicants for seats for the Sunday performance had to postpone their visit. The individual members of the co. were most happily placed in this comedy, and the result was a thoroughly delightful performance. Last Paradise week of 22.

J. R. RINGWALT.

JERSEY CITY.

Tom, Dick and Harry, one of the best musical pieces of the season, opened at the Academy of Music 16-23, to very good business. The three stars—George L. Bickel, Harry Watson, Jr., and Ed Lee Mothe—are immense, and kept the audience in a roar during the entire performance. N. S. Wood in Lost in a Big City 23-28. Thomas E. Shea 30-Nov. 4.

The Four Mortons came here for the first time as stars, appearing in Breaking Into Society, a good farce-comedy, full of bright lines. Al. Leech and The Three Rosebuds in Girls Will Be Girls 23-28. Tracked Around the World 30-Nov. 4.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians' benefit at the Bijou Theatre 22. Frank Fogarty, the Dublin minstrel, and John A. Driscoll, singer, will head the bill. Harry Hogan, business-manager and treasurer of the Bijou Theatre, is home sick.

Frank E. Henderson's new co., with Robert Conness as the star in Lieutenant Dick, U. S. A., commenced rehearsals here 17. The season opens Nov. 4 at Peekskill, N. Y.

WALTER C. SMITH.

TORONTO.

The Education of Mr. Pipp at the Princess 17 played to fair sized audiences the first three nights of the week.

At the Grand 17 Me, Him and I, the musical melange, was the attraction, and seemed to take with the crowded house of Tuesday evening.

The bill at Shea's this week is one of the best seen here this season and is filling the house at every performance, the Cutty Family and Lynd being the special attractions.

When the World Sleeps at the Majestic 17 was a melodrama full of amusing and tragic climaxes and played to fair business. The second act, in which the burning of the mill takes place, held the breathless attention of the audience.

The Dreamland Burlesquers at the Star give as good a performance as has been seen here for some time. The chorus is a bevy of pretty girls who possess good voices and their handsome costumes set them off to perfection.

STANLEY McKEOWN BROWN.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Frank Daniels in Sergeant Brue played a successful engagement first half week 9 at the Metropolitan. He was followed by San Toy, which did not do as well owing no doubt to the poor way in which it was presented. This week, 15, we have Mrs. Wiggs, with Madge Carr Cooke in the title-role, and the other parts played by the same excellent co. of actors who were here last season. It is drawing good business. Francis Wilson in Cousin Billy and a one-act play called The Little Father of the Wilderness follows latter half of week. The Sho-Gun 22. Ethel Barrymore 26. Home Folks 29. The Counting Nov. 2.

This season Florence Bindley has a vehicle in keeping with her abilities as an entertainer. The Belle of the West is a musical play of much merit, and gives the star ample opportunities. It played a very successful engagement at the Bijou week 8. Joe Welch in The Peddler is drawing well pleased audiences this week, 15. A Race for Life 22.

Emma Eames will appear at the Auditorium in the near future.

CHARLES M. LANE.

CLEVELAND.

We were treated to a new musical play at the Euclid Avenue Opera House 16-21, with Marie Cahill as the star; both certainly made good, and the piece will be numbered among the season's successes. The piece was well staged and the chorus effective. Robert Edeson in Strongheart 22-28.

Vaughan Glaser's co. gave a fair presentation of The Climbers at the Colonial Theatre 16-21. Old Heidelberg will be the closing attraction of the engagement 23-28.

Pretty Peggy, with Jane Corcoran in the stellar role, was at the Lyceum Theatre 16-21. Miss Corcoran is an actress of much merit, and was supported by a good co. The Seminary Girl 23-28.

A Girl of the Streets was the bill at the Cleveland Theatre 16-21. After Midnight 23-28.

George V. Hobart, one of the authors of Moonshine, witnessed the performance at the Euclid Avenue Opera House 16.

Sousa's Band held forth to two immense audiences at Gray's Armory 14.

WILLIAM CRASTON.

DENVER.

Tim Murphy played a successful engagement at the Broadway 9-14, presenting in an excellent manner A Corner in Coffee and David Garrick. May Irwin in Mrs. Black is Back 16-21. Prince of Pilsen 23-28.

The Volunteer Organist drew crowded houses at the Tabor 8-14. Buster Brown 15-21, to be followed by Holty Toity.

The Merry Makers opened a week's engagement at the Empire 15, with Mlle. Bartollett, M. J. Kelly, Alfred Grant, Sherman and Fisher, Dick Brown, Tom Robinson, and the Exposition Four as special features.

J. C. Lewis in 81 Plunkard will be the attraction at the Curtis 14-21.

MARY A. BELL.

LIQUEUR

PÈRES CHARTREUX

—GREEN AND YELLOW—

THIS FAMOUS CORDIAL, NOW MADE AT TARRAGONA, SPAIN, WAS FOR CENTURIES DISTILLED BY THE CARTHUSIAN MONKS (PERES CHARTREUX) AT THE MONASTERY OF LA GRANDE CHARTREUSE, FRANCE, AND KNOWN THROUGHOUT THE WORLD AS CHARTREUSE. THE ABOVE CUT REPRESENTS THE BOTTLE AND LABEL EMPLOYED IN THE PUTTING UP OF THE ARTICLE SINCE THE MONKS' EXPULSION FROM FRANCE, AND IT IS NOW KNOWN AS LIQUEUR PERES CHARTREUX (THE MONKS, HOWEVER, STILL RETAIN THE RIGHT TO USE THE OLD BOTTLE AND LABEL AS WELL), DISTILLED BY THE SAME ORDER OF MONKS WHO HAVE SECURELY GUARDED THE SECRET OF ITS MANUFACTURE FOR HUNDREDS OF YEARS AND WHO ALONE POSSESS A KNOWLEDGE OF THE ELEMENTS OF THIS DELICIOUS NECTAR.

Very, Very Clever and Talented Little Misses, the

SISTERS McCONNELL

That is the opinion of every one who has witnessed their endeavors. They recently have played Louise and Henriette in The Two Orphans. The best of old critics say these roles have not been better played since the days of Kate Claxton. This proves the girls can act.

Very strong in soubrettes, boys, ingenues and juvenile leads. Specialties or a real big feature. Always ready to negotiate with good, recognized attractions and home stock companies. Address

Pink Hussars Produced—The Earl and the Girl Liked—Many Changes Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.

F. C. Whitney's first offering at the Chicago Opera House, The Pink Hussars, was produced last Monday night with John Slavin starred and the English pony ballet featured. The book is by C. E. Campbell and R. M. Skinner, and the music by Julian Edwards and Alfred E. Aarons. On the opening night a cordial audience encouraged the actors liberally, and the newspaper notices have been fairly complimentary. For a comedian making his first appearance as a star Mr. Slavin did not seem to have equipped himself with much especial preparation or business, but he managed to work in several incidental hits that gave promise of a successful development of the part. The authors have not provided him with any too much material.

In fact the book is only fair, and the music seemed, considering it all, insufficiently entertaining, to say nothing about indenting the sensorium. The Pink Hussars finally arrived, in the last act, backward—that is, the anatomical display was backed in, and left standing backward obliquely across the stage in a stiff and stupid array for several moments. The performance finished rather tamely. I hear that the Hussars production has been much improved since the opening. The story is about a Mayor of Kankakee, Ill., who goes to Europe and becomes entangled through engaging himself to marry three women. One, whom he meets in the first act, in Paris, through a marriage broker, who goes about with his group of interesting samples, induces him to go to Budapest. The scene of the second act, on an island between Buda and Pest, is in a garden, evening, with the lights of the city back across the river. A Hungarian officer, in love with the Hungarian fiancée of the Mayor of Kankakee, complicates the story here, and a group of Kankakee folk help on the story and comedy. The Hussars come in as soldiers of the dual kingdom, and the pony ballet comes in when it pleases, apparently. Slavin, as the diminutive and timid Mayor, is pursued by a big, burly, irate cowboy with a gun, and thus much of the feeding of the star part is done. Slavin got considerable applause during the first act, and finally made a hit with a burlesque French grand opera outburst in the finale. The audience sat up and noticed his good voice. His dancing was always successful. The grace of Mabel Hollins, as the milliner girl, was appreciated, but her songs were more pleasingly acted than sung. Genevieve Findlay infused some life into the production as the Hungarian heiress and beauty, and her contralto solos were all redemanded. The voice of J. H. Pratt, as Captain Zitsky, and Arthur Earnest, as Jack, a Kankakee character, were exceptionally pleasing, and their rather tame parts sufficiently well played. Frederick Van Rensellaer had an effective make-up as the marriage broker and made a good impression in the part. The audience did not seem to know how it liked Edward Paulton's jerky English laugh at first, but the character seemed to grow in favor and bids fair to become one of the most praiseworthy in the production. W. H. White, as the comic Kankakee editor, and Frank Farrington, as the tall, pale Reverend Flood, have received good notices for conventional parts. W. W. Black played the cowboy conventionally, and Frederick Edwards was acceptable as the hotel keeper. The cast included Blanch Gilson as Lieutenant Schnipp, Charles Homan as the art student, L. P. Botsford as the waiter, E. G. Laird as the beggar, Lois E. Tabor as the young widow, Frances Marie as Marjorie, Rowenna Lammee as May, and Isabelle Girardot as the maid. The pony ballet was immediately recognized as thoroughly accomplished in this kind of entertainment, and several of their acrobatic achievements were instantaneous hits. The costuming, with the exception of the pink hussars, was in good taste, and it is to be hoped that this otherwise fairly creditable production will not have to carry very long the incubus of the obsolete march à la amazons.

James Wall, in town last week as manager of Her Wedding Day at the Columbus, was at the same theatre sixteen years ago with Daniel Sully, when it was Havlin's. Mr. Wall says Sully just turned 'em away all the time.

Home Folks comes to McVicker's Nov. 2.

Colonel John D. Hopkins, of St. Louis, was in town last week on business connected with his circuit, represented here by J. J. Murdock, at the Orpheum headquarters.

Charles W. Strine is in town representing various attractions, among which are The Earl and the Girl, of which he is manager, at the Grand, and Sara Bernhardt, who is coming to the Grand Opera House, Nov. 20, for one week. Mr. Strine says her repertoire will be La Sorciere, Camille, Adrienne Lecouvreur, L'Aiglon, Femme de Claude, Fedora and Phedre, or Fade, as Mr. Strine pronounces it, Hibernianlike.

The Ham Tree follows Forty-five Minutes from Broadway at the Colonial.

Eddie Foy and The Earl and the Girl were a quick success at the Grand Opera House. The audiences have been enthusiastic, the press notices good and the engagement increasingly prosperous. Foy was forced to make a speech the opening night, and as late in the week as Wednesday night the applause after the first act was virtually a demand for a speech, but he didn't make it. Mr. Foy is not the youthful and somewhat too rough fun-maker of his earlier days, but a thorough, clever and seasoned comedian. Georgia Caine was as charming as ever, and Zelma Rawlston caught the fancy of the audience with her song, "A Man Made to Order for Me." "Spoon with Me" was as big a hit as ever. The comedy is greatly improved over its condition at the Garrick.

If ever an audience surrendered completely to the genial influence of a play the crowd that greeted The Heir to the Hoorah on the opening night at the Illinois did. Everybody seemed delighted, and it was hard to tell whether the play or the excellent acting was uppermost in the mind. The men especially—i.e., Guy Bates Post, Ernest Lamson, Wilfred Lucas, Ben Higgins, C. C. Quinby, Colin Campbell, Brinsley Shaw, and Wright Kramer—were exhilaratingly good. T. Tamamoto's Hush, the valet, was very clever and natural. Jane Peyton, showing marked improvement as an actress, was an excellent Kate Brandon, and Louise Rutter was a bright and pretty Madge Casey. The engagement is proving one of the most profitable as well as enjoyable of the season at the Illinois.

Hap Ward was very cordially received in The Grafter at the Great Northern, and Guy Steeley's "musical storyette" turned out to be an easy running vehicle, being well oiled with wit, humor and ingenuity. As the trampish grafter always looking for a chance to "touch," Ward was successful in his characteristic manner. Lucy Daly's dancing was an immediate hit. William Friend earned good notices for intelligent and promising comedy as Budd. The company is large and lively. The audiences have been large all the week.

Richard Mansfield comes to the Grand Opera House next Monday for a week of Don Carlos and returns in May for four weeks.

Comin' Through the Rye, a Lederer-Philadelphia production, has been sold, I am told, to Will Block.

The Syndicate takes The Squaw Man, apparently with the consent of Liebler, away from this city abruptly to use it in New York against Belasco's production of a similar style. Such is the published announcement. The Bishop's Carriage succeeds The Squaw Man. The Bishop's Carriage is a dramatization by Channing Pollock, and Mr. Pollock is an official of the rapidly growing independent circuit. An extra matinee of The Squaw Man was given Friday.

The Little Minister showed its strength as a stock play at The New Marlowe in Englewood last week, keeping the theatre well filled all week. The production was creditable, Willis Ha'l giving a good impersonation of Dyshart. Edith Julian's Nan Webster, especially in the cottage scene, was most lifelike and thoroughly well played. Francis Pierlot's Thrum's policeman was very well done.

K. Sherman Canby arrived ahead of The Nazarene at the Studebaker.

Colonel C. E. White, who has been across the Continent so much that he ought to be able to get up the best travelog on American scenery, has been in town doing his usual finished work ahead of The Smart Set, at the Columbus this week. Mr. White conducted a circus the length and breadth of Long Island last summer, and at Oyster Bay invited the President's children and all their friends. They came 400 strong and the elephant was so glad to see Teddy, Jr., that he tipped over the peanut stand.

The bills this week: Grand Opera House, Eddie Foy in The Earl and the Girl; Garrick, Grace Van Studdiford in Lady Teazle; Studebaker, The Nazarene; Illinois, The Heir to the Hoorah; Auditorium, Humpty Dumpty; Great Northern, Hap Ward in The Grafter; Chicago Opera House, The Pink Hussars; La Salle, Yankee Regent; Colonial, Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway; People's, The Home Seekers; Columbus, The Smart Set; Marlowe, Through the Picket Line; Alhambra, Across the Pacific; Bijou, Fitzsimmons in Fight for Love; Academy, Her Wedding Day; Criterion, No Mother to Guide Her; Avenue, Michael Strogoff.

The one hundredth performance of The Yankee Regent at the LaSalle is approaching, and meantime Ben Jerome is at work on its successor at "the only musical stock theatre in the country."

William Jossey's Du Barry is going out South and West, under the management of H. G. Bartlett. Mr. Bartlett is from Arizona.

James McCabe has joined Hooligan in New York, to play Hooligan.

Hart Conway, director of the Chicago Musical College School of Acting, has begun preparations for his first production de luxe of the season. Beaumont and Fletcher's Knight of the Burning Pestle. There are a number of old ballads to be sung and a good deal of scenery will have to be made for the production. It will take place at the Studebaker. Franklin P. Bentsen, a pupil of Mr. Conway, who has aided him in such productions, has joined Mantell, and John O'Brien, another of his talented pupils, has joined the Greet company.

Edward R. Haas, the leading man at the People's, was engaged by the French Club to assist in staging its plays for this season.

George Wood, after helping a whole lot to make Riverview Park the huge success it was last Summer and formerly the Horse Show and Auditorium press expert, was quickly engaged by Mr. Lederer for the Colonial, and again he is where the crowds are coming. Possibly Mr. Wood is a mascot.

The new drop curtain at the Auditorium, 52 x 40, is said to be the largest in the country.

BOSTON.

The Lion and the Mouse—Mlle. Modiste—Henrietta Crosman's Success—Benton's Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BOSTON, Oct. 23.

Of the various changes of bill in town to-night the most important comes to the Park, where Henry B. Harris gives the first performance, after three trial nights in Connecticut, of The Lion and the Mouse, a modern play of frenzied finance by Charles Klein. The house was a large one, and there was the verdict of decided approval for the new drama. Mr. Klein's theme is the corrupting influence of monopolists upon the politics of this country. Shirley Rossmore, the daughter of Judge Rossmore, returning from Europe, meets on the steamer Jefferson Ryder, the son of John Burdett Ryder, known in the financial world of which he is the despot as Ready Money Ryder. Jefferson falls in love with Shirley, who in turn is attracted to him. On her arrival in America she finds her father ruined in reputation, broken in health and financially embarrassed, the result of a ruling adverse to the interests of a coterie of financial magnates at the head of which is Ryder. Aided by corrupt politicians they retaliate by causing Judge Rossmore's removal from the bench pending investigations of alleged fraudulent practices. One man holds the proof of the Judge's innocence, and that is Ryder. Shirley determines to clear the stain from her father's name, and she has begun a novel which has the character of the Money King among its chief characters. "The Great American Octopus" is its name. Ryder reads the work and is impressed by its power and by the fact that she were better his friend than his enemy. He sends for her and places at her disposal many carefully selected documents from which he asks her to write his biography. He makes her an offer of a great sum of money for the service. The love romance, however, is the element which brings the solution of the plot. Edward Bresse and Grace Elliston were featured deservedly in the production, and their characters are startlingly like John D. Rockefeller and Ida M. Tarbell, the anti-Standard Oil crusader, in their individualities. Others in the company are Richard Bennett, Marguerite St. John, E. A. Eberle, Sadie Stringham, Frazer Coulter, Carolyn Elberts, Walter Allen, Julia Hanchett, Marion Johnson, Martin Sabin, Margaret Gray, Edward See, and Augustin Wilkes.

The Empire Stock company makes one of its most important strikes of the season in the production of Richard Carvel, which was originally given here by John Drew. At that time the dramatization of the novel failed to hit, and the explanation was that it had been made an effort to appeal to the wrong audience. That that was right was clearly shown by the success which was made this evening. Howell Hansel was in the title-role, and Mary Hall, back in the cast after a well-earned vacation, fairly divided honors with him. Adelaide Manola has been splendidly received as a new member of the company.

The unquestioned success of Cleopatra at the Castle Square turned the plans of the management completely topsy turvy. The arrangement had been to give the Sardou play only a week, but by the second night it was very evident that the spectacular setting and the effective acting had scored so instantaneously that an extension was decidedly desirable. Consequently the preparations for the production of The Song of the Sword were all called off, and Cleopatra will hold the stage until the time comes for beginning the season of Shakespearean plays.

Billy B. Van is the newcomer of the week at the Globe, and he appears there in The Errand Boy, which had two successful engagements at that house last season. The musical farce comes in a new edition, and changes in the songs and specialties are all for the better. Mr. Van's personality pervades the entire production, and Rose Beaumont, as before, is an important factor in the cast.

This week ends the long run of The College Widow at the Tremont. The George Ade comedy will now start on its road tour, which is so booked that Worcester is the only city in Massachusetts and the only one night stand that will be played throughout the season. Mr. Savage's grand opera company will follow at the Tremont, opening in Aida.

As Ye Sow is in its third week at the Majestic, where the present indications point to an engagement at least ten weeks long. An improvement has been made in the cast by the return of Frankiyn Roberts to the character of the runaway brother, which he originally played in Chicago. He gives it just the right touch and makes it share the prominence secured by Frank Gillmore as the pugilistic parson.

Denman Thompson and The Old Homestead have started on the last half of their engagement at the Boston, and the hayseed masterpiece continues to attract as large audiences as ever. At the first of the season it was given out that Mr. Thompson would play only in Boston, but now it appears that he will continue in his old character after it leaves Boston for its tour Westward.

Henrietta Crosman scored an immense personal success at the Hollis in Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary, which has been recognized as an Americanization of A Scrap of Paper. To be sure, the credit of our indebtedness to Sardou was given in the advance arrangements, but he deserves more than that. Miss Crosman is delightful in the scene where she searches for the tell-tale love letter, and in the last act, with Boyd Putnam, she could not be improved upon. She has an excellent supporting company, among the best liked being Mr. Putnam, Addison Pitt, George Woodward, Walter Thomas, Miriam Nesbitt, Ida Vernon, Louise Galloway and Blanche Weaver.

Fritzi Scheff has not seen an empty seat at the Colonial Theatre during the past week, and Mlle. Modiste has drawn out the largest sale that the house has ever known. Indeed, when Henry Blosson, the librettist, wanted to take in three friends, he had to go to the box office and buy four tickets, and on the last night of the week the police stopped the sale of admission tickets. It is the best comic opera seen here in a long time, and Fritzi Scheff's impersonation of the milliner who becomes prima donna and Victor Herbert's music are about even for honors.

Why Girls Leave Home is the melodrama of the week at the Grand Opera House. Clare Joel leads the effective company.

Nobody's Claim was the play of the week at the Bowdoin Square. Charlotte Hunt has a capital character in Madge and shows her versatility, while Charles Mitten, Henry Alexander and Butler Haviland are placed to special advantage in the production. The World is to be revived to follow.

Jerome K. Jerome, who came here to give a single matinee recital at the Hollis Thursday, will have a chance to show how he can live up to his title of the Mark Twain of England, as he will meet the real Mark Twain at a reception to be given at Cambridge to the Boston Authors' Club the afternoon before.

Cloverdell, George T. Richardson's new comic opera, is to be produced at South Framingham Nov. 25.

Walter Lewis, the son of Horace Lewis, and who was so successful with Otis Skinner, has entered into financial life and has a fine situation with the International Trust Company.

Louis Nethersole made a flying trip to Washington to-night so as to be present at the opening of his sister Olga's American tour. He will return to Mlle. Modiste later in the week.

An exceedingly pleasant house warming was that which John Craig and his wife (Mary Young) and her mother, Mrs. Richard Denny Young, gave to their friends at 217 Babcock street, Brookline, last evening. They have an attractive home there and a number of well-known players were present during the evening.

Capt. George Martin has been discharged from the Massachusetts General Hospital, and he went at once to the home of Eben Plympton, near Plymouth. The case came up again last Saturday and was again continued for another week.

At the meeting of the Actors' Church Alliance at the Church of the Advent last week tributes were paid to the memory of Sir Henry Irving, and very impressive references to his death were made by Frank Ilimore, of the As Ye Sow company, Dr. J. B. Thornton and others. A committee was appointed to draw up appropriate resolutions, and consisted of Jennie Kendrick Seeley, Joseph B. Fuller and Rev. Edward M. Gushee. A valuable gift of costume plates has been sent to the Boston chapter by Charles C. Catlin, of Brooklyn, and will be mounted so as to be made available for members of the profession.

The body of Mrs. Sarah Green Le Moyne, the first wife of W. J. Le Moyne, was brought to Boston and cremated at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

Henry S. Alward, who made a flying trip to join A Fair Exchange here and then start West ahead of the company, received an offer by cable to go to South Africa with Mrs. Langtry as business-manager for her tour in Mrs. Deering's Divorce, Iris, and The Walls of Jericho. He was compelled to decline on account of his engagement for this season.

Lindsay Morison has arranged for a novel cyclus at the Empire, for he is going to do up Winston Churchill and the Carvel family à la Wagner. He is going to start with Richard Carvel and finish with The Crisis, neither of which has been seen here in stock.

E. N. Catlin, musical director at the Tremont, is disposing of his valuable collection of old violins and bows. He has several Cremonas in the number.

Denman Thompson had a number of valuable personal papers in the safe of the post office at Swanzey, N. H., which was blown open by thieves just on the eve of the opening of his Boston engagement.

G. E. Horne, of North Lexington, made the acquaintance of a young man at the West End recently and took him to see As Ye Sow; but the new friend reaped, for he went out between the acts and failed to return or to bring back his benefactor's pocketbook.

It is a queer coincidence that five principal members of the once famous Pittsburgh Stock company were playing in Boston last week—Henrietta Crosman, leading woman; Marion Ballou, soubrette; Thomas W. Ross, John Waldron, and Charles Wyngate.

Gertrude Yerxa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barclay Yerxa, of White Hill, Somerville, has gone to joint the Strongheart company in New York and will come to Boston in February. She made her first hit as an amateur actress when she played Ophelia in Hamlet at a performance given at the Malden Auditorium.

JAY BENTON.

BALTIMORE.

A Revised Wizard of Oz—Ireland: 1798 at Albaugh's—The Toast of the Town—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.

A new edition of The Wizard of Oz is disclosed to view at Ford's this evening. Montgomery and Stone are apparently as original and certainly as amusing as when they were first seen in this play. Among those in the cast are Allene Crater, Virginia Foltz, Marion Stanley, Mona Desmond, Leona Stevens, and Therese von Brune. The chorus is an exceedingly attractive one. Richard Carle in The Mayor of Tokio will follow.

Lloyd Bingham appears at Albaugh's in Ireland: 1798. Mr. Bingham is under the management of Amelia Bingham, and the play is from the pens of Carrine and Michael Jordan. The story tells of the trying times of 1798 in Ireland and gives many realistic pictures of that troublous period. Mr. Bingham is supported by an excellent company, including A. S. Lipman, William Herbert, Joseph Allen, Lisle Leigh, Elizabeth Mercier and about thirty-five others. At the close of the week he will give place to The Darling of the Gods, with Percy Haswell and Robert T. Haines heading the cast.

Viola Allen is at the Academy this week as Betty Singleton in The Toast of the Town. Miss Allen is supported by an excellent company and the performance is an interesting and even one. Oct. 30 we will have Maude Adams in James M. Barrie's play Peter Pan.

Yorke and Adams head their own company, which is a large one, and hold the stage of the Auditorium in their two-act musical comedy, Bankers and Brokers. The next attraction will be Bickle, Watson and Wrothe in Tom, Dick and Harry.

The pretty scenic drama Ninety and Nine entertains the patrons of the Holliday Street. It is presented by an excellent cast, which includes a number of good voices, and the scenic effects are very realistic. The underline is Dangers of Working Girls.

Those visiting Blaney's this week will see The Child Slaves of New York. The play is of a highly dramatic and somewhat exciting character. It is presented by a capable company, and the performance is satisfactory. A Girl of the Streets will be seen next week.

The drama Hearts of the Blue Ridge is seen at the Bijou this week. The play abounds in specialties, among which are the musical Buckleys, Eddie Mills, Willard and Reeves, Mills and Adele Lee Mack, and Myrtle Mack.

The visit of The Darling of the Gods at Albaugh's next week is being looked forward to with great pleasure. It is easy to predict that their business will be the capacity of the house.

The Lyric Theatre has changed hands. It is now under the control of Fred C. Gottlieb, who says that he intends to make it a home of first class music.

ST. LOUIS.

Sergeant Brue at the Olympic—The Girl and the Bandit—Dockstader's Minstrels.

(Special to The Mirror.)

St. Louis, Oct. 23.

Advance men, press representatives and theatrical exploiters-general have been going great local stunts playing even with or getting ahead of each other for the plays that started last night. Veteran George Bowles came in early and set the pins for Sergeant Brue, and his mere presence here threw scares of large dimensions into Stewart L. De Kraft, whose The Girl and the Bandit had to get all sorts of "representation." Lee Kugel blew in with The Winning Girl pictures and dope and the result was that any dramatic, city or managing editor who wanted "girl" pictures and "girl" stories could get them and to spare. Here in St. Louis it's "girl" pictures now, the mere actor-man no longer counting. And the girls must be made into St. Louis girls. Well, so long as there's a "gentlemen's agreement" all around and everybody knows that he is "doing" and being "done" by the other fellow it is best to let the good work go on.

Sergeant Brue fits Frank Daniels like no other part he has had in many years. He fairly revels in it and the Liza Lenman music is the thing for those to whom musical comedy as such has got to the point of stereotypization. The Olympic seldom held a more thoroughly amused Sunday night crowd than yesterday's. Sallie Fisher, Clara Bell Jerome, Annabelle Whitford and a big company are doing the trick for Sergeant Brue, which in a week's stay will quite convince us why London and New York took so kindly to it for nearly two years.

The Girl and the Bandit at the Garrick may not be new, but it got the same sort of send-off yesterday afternoon. Its value is in an undeniably fine cast, in which vets and comers are equally proportioned. Mabel Hite and Violet Gilnette share the honors in song and comedy, and Joseph Miron, George J. MacFarlane, and John G. Sparks prove themselves a high class trio of merry-makers. The play went excellently to-night before an audience of a calibre different from that of Sunday and The Girl and the Bandit's lines have evidently fallen in pleasant places.

Grace Van Studdiford's second and last week at the Garrick closed fully as big as the first, and there is but one estimate of her work in Lady Teazle: it has revealed her as one of the very best comic opera singers in the country.

Lew Dockstader, with perhaps the largest local following among minstrel men, is at the Century. He is having things his own way. The automobile stunt has been in the repair shop, but comes out at every performance with all its new paint and trimmings, and is, if anything, funnier than ever. Dockstader has got them all beaten by sheer brightness and keenness of style. With him, as formerly, are Neil O'Brien, Carroll Johnson, Manual Romaine, and about a hundred others. The novelty, An Album of Minstrelsy, is a pleasing and effective invention.

Die Wilde Katze (The Wild Cat) was last night's offering of the German Stock company at the Odeon. It proved to be a most farcical work of the best German school, the incidental songs and dances giving the company every chance for the display of versatility. The success of the Heinemann-Welb season is assured, the subscription list and increasing public support eliminating all consideration of financial matters.

Sky Farm, a pastoral play which has taken high rank among the sentimental dramas of the past few seasons, is at the Imperial, being shown for the first time at popular prices. It loses little of its attractiveness on that account; on the contrary, the lower prices will, to quote our best intellectual farmer, Ralph Waldo Emerson, cause it to "yield shade and fruit to wide neighborhoods of men."

On the last day of his stay here Robert Fitzsimmons waylaid Governor Folk at the Planters and presented him with a horseshoe. The Governor received the gift graciously, but declined to "licker up" at the bar with Fitz, who later was heard to mutter: "Wonder what the Guv would say if he knew I hammered out that shoe in one of Ed Butler's blacksmith shops this morning?" (Butler is the Democratic boss whom Folk has tried his best to convict for bribery in the boodle cases.)

Howard Hall, the Beau Brummel of melodrama, returned to Havlin's yesterday, this time bringing his latest play, The Millionaire Detective. The offering has novelties fully as thrilling as the famous lion-bluffing act in The Man Who Dared, which was Mr. Hall's bill on a former occasion. The Millionaire Detective, while built on regulation thriller lines, makes for betterment in that much attention has been paid to the scenery, several "big" incidents in the story being very bravely furbished forth in this relation. While the gallery yesterday was not quite so vociferous as usual, the piece took better with the body of the house. It is sure of a profitable week.

Rose Melville is paying the penalty of her peculiar popularity by not being able to get away from Sis Hopkins. She is with the old standby at the Grand, and the audiences Sunday afternoon and night fairly caused the walls of the old place to bulge and quiver. The hardest work Rose Melville is doing these days consists in trying to find another play; next to that, taking care of her money. But let her take comfort. The advice she needs is Joe Jefferson's: "Don't elevate the stage; stick to the profitable thing through thick and thin." The greatest elevator of the stage, the greatest stage producer of all times, was Henry Irving. He died a poor man. Jefferson stuck to Rip Van Winkle, a mere comical episode, and left an estate worth millions.

It transpires that Missouri is taking Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots seriously. A medical college in one of our smaller towns where special theories in medicine are propagated was represented in much force at the Century's Saturday night performance. Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots, it should be explained, shows how a man may be made moral by a simple twist of the neck.

The Navy Department has called off the exhibition of the naval biograph from the Portland Exposition, which was booked for two performances at the Odeon Oct. 28. Lieutenant Signor, in charge of the naval recruiting station here, was notified by wire that the engagement had been cancelled. No explanation was given. The exhibition was intended to tell boys between eighteen and twenty-five how nice it is to sail the briny in the eight-million dollar battleships—just one grand sweet song of grog and skittles.

Underlined attractions are:—Olympic, Woodland: Garrick, The Winning Girl (another Perley offering): Century, Harry Blossom's A Fair Exchange: Grand, The Runaways: Havlin's McFadden's Row of Flats: Odeon, German Stock company, Sardou's Odette: Imperial, Young Buffalo, King of the Wild West.

William Porteous, St. Louis' leading baritone these twenty-five years, is to be tendered a testimonial concert at the Odeon to-morrow night.

RICHARD SPAMER.

CINCINNATI.

Woodland—Twelfth Night—Melodrama—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CINCINNATI, Oct. 23.

Henry W. Savage's beautiful production of Woodland was at the Grand to-night, and pleased one of the largest audiences of the season. Harry Bulger, who had not been seen on the local stage for many years, had the leading role. Francis Wilson follows.

Robinson's attraction this week is Twelfth Night, with Lavinia Shannon as Viola. Considering the magnitude of the undertaking, the work of the Forepaugh players is remarkable.

The Hanlon Brothers' spectacular extravaganza, Fantasma, is the bill at the Walnut this week, and is attracting much attention. In the company are Clara Thropp, Lorie Palmer, and no less than five of the Hanlon family.

The sensation of the past week here, theatrically speaking, has been the entrance of Congressman Rhynock, George B. Cox, and their associates into the field of theatre building in connection with the Shubert enterprises. These

MARIE PHYLLIS SHERWOOD.

Marie Phyllis Sherwood commenced her theatrical career when less than six months old, appearing unexpectedly on the stage of the Arch Street Theatre while her mother, Grace Sherwood, was singing. After that appearance she was banished to the Convent of Mercy, where she remained until her twelfth year. Her real career began with The Little Princess, when she played the role of Jessie. From that company she went to understudy Beatrice Terry in The Man from Blankley's. Last season she was a member of the Peggy from Paris company and received much praise for her clever work. Miss Sherwood is an excellent musician, has a very pleasing singing voice, and can dance. Her aspiration is to occupy a position like that of Maude Adams. She is now at liberty for ingenue roles.

gentlemen not only have unlimited means, but the reputation of doing most thoroughly anything that they attempt, and their new venture will be watched with the keenest interest by thousands of their friends in this city.

Heuck's has Langdon McCormick's new melodrama, How Hearts are Broken, for this week. The attendance at the opening performances has been large.

At Piney Ridge is at the Lyceum, where it is repeating its success of other years.

The German stock company last week played Rosenmontag, and yesterday was seen for the first time in Der Goldfuchs. H. A. Sutton.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. Fiske's Triumph—Wolfville Produced —Many Melodramas—News Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.

The two weeks' engagement of Mrs. Fiske and her brilliant company at the new Lyric Theatre will long be remembered by our best theatregoers as the most impressive event of the season. Leah Kleschna is surrounded by an atmosphere of reality rarely seen on the mimic stage, and the press has devoted columns to the wonderful acting of Mrs. Fiske and her associates. Leah Kleschna is a notable example of artistic representation. The Lyric Theatre is already sold out for every performance of Leah Kleschna, which can be truly termed the attraction of the year. Blanche Bates in The Girl of the Golden West, under the personal supervision of David Belasco, follows Oct. 30 for a two weeks' term.

Wolfville, a new play by Clyde Fitch and Willis Steele, was presented for the first time on any stage to-night at the Broad Street Theatre, with N. C. Goodwin in the star role of Cherokee Hall, a Western gambler with heroic ideas. The story of the play deals with the coming of Cherokee Hall to the Road-to-Ruin saloon, and setting up his faro layout there with Faro Nell as his partner and "lookout." Nell is a product of a Tucson dive, and Hall has picked her up and in a measure reformed her. He is in love with a girl in Wolfville and Nell's jealousy is aroused. When the stage is robbed by British Bill, a half-breed, her feelings make a traitor of her, and she conspires with the road agent to throw the guilt on Cherokee and hand him over to Judge Lynch. This is the main thread of the plot, which finally unravels, and Cherokee is cleared of suspicion. Nell repents and reforms, Bill pays a penalty for his robbery and everything ends happily.

Mr. Goodwin in Wolfville has one of his old time roles, and the first performance promises a successful run. The supporting cast includes Katherine Grey, Jessie Busley, Phyllis Rankin, Josephine Sherwood, Guy Standing, Sam Edwards, Charles Butler, W. H. Post, Nell O'Brian, Rapley Holmes and Fulton Russell. Henrietta Crosman will follow on Nov. 6 for two weeks.

Joe Weber and his merry associates met with a big reception this evening at the Chestnut Street Opera House on the inauguration of their two weeks' engagement in Higgledy-Piggledy and The College Widower. The Rogers Brothers in Ireland will follow on Nov. 6. The Duchess of Dantzic Nov. 20.

Little Johnny Jones, with George M. Cohan, Ethel Levy, Sam Ryan, Tom Lewis, Jerry Cohan, Helen F. Cohan, and Adele Rafter, enter to-night their second and final week to the best engagement they have ever played in the Quaker City. Grace George in The Marriage of William Ashe comes Oct. 30. McIntyre and Heath in The Ham Tree Nov. 13. The College Widow Nov. 27.

The talk of building a theatre in West Philadelphia has been going the rounds for many years. Here is the latest: George A. Wagefforth, the present lessee and manager of the Grand Opera House, will build a theatre on Lancaster Avenue near Fortieth Street, to be called the William Penn Theatre, grounds to be broken in February and be completed for season 1906-07. The bookings to be furnished by Stair and Havlin. This part of the city has grown to immense proportions in the past ten years. The population west of the Schuylkill River forms a city by itself and really would pay as an investment for an enterprising theatrical manager.

A new play by Augustus Thomas, The Embassy Ball, with Lawrance D'Orsay as star, opened to-night at the Garrick Theatre for a two weeks' term. The star is well supported by Charlotte Walker, Harry Harwood, Ida Darling, and Stanley Dark. Kyrle Bellew in Raffles comes Nov. 6.

Love's Lottery closed a two weeks' engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre Oct. 21, Madame Schumann-Heink being out of the cast the most of the time. Her part was taken by Claire Maentz, who will likely continue for the rest of the season.

Checkers, with Hans Roberts in the title-role, holds the boards of the Walnut Street Theatre for the coming two weeks. It is a good benefit racket attraction, with matinees at popular prices. Charles E. Grapewin in It's Up to You, John Henry, comes the week of Nov. 6.

The Grand Opera House has a new musical comedy, taken from the German, and entitled Gay New York, with Dan Mason, Charles R. Foreman, William Barlowe, Ed Brennan, Blanch Carlyle and a large and attractive chorus. It is prettily staged and pleased a large audience this evening with many new and enterprising features. Eva Tanguay in The Sambo Girl Oct. 30. Tom, Dick and Harry Nov. 6.

The Isle of Spice is the attraction for this week at the Park Theatre. Leslie Leigh, Robert Dunbar, Herbert Cawthorne, Mattie Marta and a large chorus contingent furnish plenty of amusement. The Beauty and the Beast follows Oct. 30, Creston Clarke Nov. 6, Denman Thompson Nov. 13, for a three weeks' stay.

Queen of the Highbinders, under management of A. H. Woods, is a good card this week at the National Theatre. Paul Burns and Sadie Fields are in the heroic roles and have excellent support. The twelve realistic scenes are highly appreciated by a large audience. David Harum follows Oct. 30.

Hearts of Gold, by Jay Hunt, has its first local representations at the Girard Avenue Theatre this week. The play is well presented by Maurice Freeman and a fair supporting company. It is well received. Selma Herman in Queen of the Convicts Oct. 30.

Custer's Last Fight, that was given at the National Theatre week of Oct. 2, returned this week to the People's Theatre and pleased the uptown patrons. Fast Life in New York Oct. 30. Tracked Around the World Nov. 6.

Fighting Fate, after playing an uptown theatre Oct. 2, is the attraction for this week at Blaney's Arch Street Theatre. Little Annie Blanche is a favorite and is well received by the large clientele of this popular house. How Hearts are Broken Oct. 30.

Hart's Kensington Theatre has a good card in Shadows of a Great City. In spite of its many previous engagements it opened to splendid patronage and will play to a profitable week. The Shadow Behind the Throne Oct. 30.

An interesting and creditable representation of Quo Vadis is given this week by the Forepaugh Theatre Stock company. The mounting and scenic effects are equal to its original production at our high priced theatres. George Leerock deserves special mention for the same. The entire cast is in competent hands, with business up to the usual high standard. A Gentleman of France comes Oct. 30.

The Standard Theatre stock company appears this week in The King of Detectives, one of Theodore Kremer's thrillers, with George Arvine and Mattie Choate in special roles. The Crime of Hallowe'en is due Oct. 30.

Dumont's Minstrels at the Eleventh Street Opera House find it profitable to retain last week's programme, which is truly a real minstrel show. Business is always good.

The musical season at the Academy of Music opens Oct. 27 with Fritz Scheel's first concert with the Philadelphia Orchestra. The Boston Symphony Orchestra follows Nov. 6 with five concerts. The grand opera season, with twelve evening performances and two matinees, will be inaugurated Dec. 5, with every Tuesday evening following, and the matinees Dec. 28 and March 1. S. Fernberger.

WASHINGTON.

The Belasco Opens—Blanche Bates and Olga Nethersole Welcomed—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

Washington, Oct. 23.

A theatrical event of distinct interest to Washington theatregoers is the opening to-night of the New Belasco Theatre, formerly the Lafayette Square, under the direction and management of David Belasco and the Shuberts. This adds another strong link to the now notably long chain of independent houses. The occasion is a memorable one, not only from the evident interest shown by the public in a turnout of a tremendous gathering of the most fashionable and representative of first-nighters that crowds the house from lower floor to gallery, but in the heart-felt expressions of congratulatory approval tendered the new management, and the very general line of remarks heard on every side of pronounced favorable recognition of the very radical lines and changes that have taken place in the local state of theatrical affairs. Blanche Bates in the new Belasco drama, The Girl of the Golden West, is the inaugural attraction, joining strongly in the splendid success of the evening. The star received an enthusiastic welcome and did remarkable work that won admiration from the start. The play scored strongly as an original and attractive picture of Western life, the experienced hand of the author being in evidence throughout the entire presentation. The company, a most excellent one, comprises Robert Hilliard, Frank Keenan, John W. Cope, James Kirkwood, Thomas J. McGrane, J. H. Benrimo, Horace James, Frederick Maxwell, Richard Heyar, Clifford Hippie, T. Hayes Hunter, J. A. Sawtelle, Robert Deshon, Lowell Sherman, Ed A. Tester, A. M. Beattie, Frederick Sidney, William Wild, H. L. Wilson, Ira M. Flick, Ignazio Biondi, and Harriet Sterling. In response to continued curtain calls at the end of the second act Mr. Belasco appeared, and with well chosen remarks thanked the large audience for their appreciation of the new firm's efforts in their endeavor to bring order out of chaos, in the opening up of an avenue and right of way for the appearance in this city of stars and attractions that have heretofore been denied that privilege. Next week the attraction will be Mrs. Tempie's Telegram.

Olga Nethersole made her first appearance in America, after an absence of more than four years, at the New National Theatre to-night, when she inaugurated her tour with the first performance of The Labyrinth, an English version, by W. L. Courtney, of Paul Hervieu's Le Dedale. The cast:

Marianne	Olga Nethersole
Max de Pogis	Hamilton Revelle
Louis (in Act I. III. IV)	Winnie Crisp
Louis (in Act I. III. IV)	Leonard Crisp
M. Vilard-Duval	William Farren, Jr.
Madame Vilard-Duval	Louise Moodie
George Le Breuil	Hubert Carter
Hubert de St. Erie	Charles Quartermaine
Paulette de St. Erie	Dorothy Grimston
Pierre	Dora Crisp
Madame de Pogis	Cicely Richards
The Doctor	Harry Dodd

The play treats of divorce, but from an absolutely novel standpoint, as it shows the uncontrollable instinct of a woman to return to the man who is the father of her child. It is nature's argument against divorce, where there are children to the marriage. Miss Nethersole's role is that of Marianne de Pogis, twice married, once divorced. In a moment of weakness, brought about by the illness of her child, Marianne surrenders to her first husband, and then, overcome with shame and remorse, she abandons both men, declaring that for the future she will live only for her child. In a highly dramatic scene in the last act, when Marianne says farewell, these two men come face to face. The denouement is as thrilling as it is unexpected. There is a quarrel, a scuffle, and both fall to instant death over a cliff. Miss Nethersole achieved a distinct success in an emotional role of power and intensity. The supporting company is an excellent one, successes being made by Hamilton Revelle, Hubert Carter, William Farren, Jr., Charles Quartermaine, Harry Dodd, Cicely Richards, Louise Moodie, and Dorothy Grimston, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, who successfully makes her first American appearance. The opening audience was a large one. The star, who is a great favorite at the Capital, appears under the patronage of the British and French Embassies, the boxes being occupied by legation parties. The production is elaborate, all of the scenery having been brought from England, while the furniture was imported from France. Viola Allen, in The Toast of the Town, follows.

The County Chairman is the attraction at the Columbia Theatre. The opening is an excellent one. Macklyn Arbuckle repeats his strong success as Jim Hackler, and Willis P. Sweatman as Sassafras Livingston. Other favorites are E. R. Phillips, Sydney Macy, Edwin Chapman, Fred Bock, Cecile Calhoun, Christine Blessing, Martha Conway and Grace Fisher. Next week, George M. Cohan and Little Johnny Jones.

At the Academy of Music Daisies of Working Girls commences to a big attendance. Manager Al. H. Woods provides an excellent interpreting company that is headed by Alma Powell. Brothers Byrne in Eight Bells follows.

It becomes my sad duty to chronicle the death, after a long illness, of Mrs. Elisabeth L. Rapley, the beloved wife of William H. Rapley, manager of the New National Theatre. The funeral occurred Saturday, the interment being in Oak Hill Cemetery. Mrs. Rapley was much esteemed as a lady of many rare virtues and estimable qualities, of a lovely and engaging disposition, and is deeply mourned by a wide circle of friends and relatives.

With the exception of Manager Ira J. La Motte, an entire new staff of house employes is installed at the Belasco Theatre to-night. Victor Johnson, the musical director for years, has been succeeded by Carl Rakeman, formerly concert master and violin soloist of the Washington Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Johnson will become conductor of the orchestra at the Majestic when that playhouse opens, Nov. 20.

A pretty wedding took place in this city recently, when Harry C. Fisk, of the Evening Star publishing department, was joined in wedlock with Margaret Eulalia Shreeve, a talented organist and musical leader of prominence. Mr. Fisk is the eldest son of the late Harry C. Fisk, well known from his connection as directing manager of Albaugh's Grand Opera House, Albaugh's Lafayette Square here, and Albaugh's Lyceum in Baltimore a few years ago.

Jerome K. Jerome will deliver his lecture, Three Men in a Boat, at the National Theatre Nov. 15.

The United States Marine Band of seventy musicians, under the leadership of William H. Santleman, will give four Sunday night concerts at the Columbia Theatre, Nov. 5, Nov. 19, Dec. 3, Dec. 17. John T. Warde.

PITTSBURGH.

Babes in the Wood—A Girl of the Streets—The Shepherd King—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

Pittsburgh, Oct. 23.

The Bijou held its customary two large audiences to-day, where Lottie Williams is seen in My Tom Boy Girl. She is suported by a good company. Next week, Child Slaves of New York.

A Girl of the Streets plays its second engagement in this city and is seen this time at our uptown house, the Empire, which held a large audience to-night. Laura Alberta heads a capable company, and the mounting is adequate. Dolly Kemper in The Gypsy Girl follows.

Babes in the Wood began its second week's engagement to-night at the Belasco before a large audience. Fred Walton has made a hit as the Toy Soldier, and the whole production ranks among the foremost of its kind. Last week's business was very good, and the outlook for this week is likewise. Mrs. Fiske's engagement next week in Leah Kleschna is being looked forward to as one of the events of the season.

At the Alvin Nancy Brown opened to a large audience to-night which seemed to enjoy this musical comedy. Mary Marble is at the head of a large and worthy company, and the whole production is a pleasing one. Way Down East follows.

Wright Lorimer in The Shepherd King commenced a two weeks' engagement at the Nixon to-night, and will be followed by Sam Bernard in The Rollicking Girl.

The usual large audiences were present to-day at the Gayety, where the New York Stars offer an entertaining show. The Kitamura's Japs is the principal feature, and the olio is a good one. The Golden Crook for next week.

The Mascotte Burlesquers, with the St. Onge Brothers as the feature, is the bill at the Academy, which held its usual crowded house to-night.

The Exposition closed its season last Saturday night, a very popular one, and it was, no doubt, profitable, too.

Roller skating at Duquesne Garden is proving popular. The ice skating season will open about the end of next month.

The Pittsburgh Orchestra season will open at Carnegie Music Hall on Nov. 2, Founder's Day. Director Emil Paur is expected here this week, and the first rehearsal will be held on Friday morning. Albert S. L. Hawna.

GOSSIP OF THE TOWN.

Last Tuesday (Oct. 17) George P. Goodale, of the Detroit Free Press, celebrated his fortieth anniversary in newspaper work. This long period has been spent uninterruptedly on the paper named. Mr. Goodale worked in a printing office as a lad, and was one of the earlier city editors of the Free Press. But he is best known to the theatre profession as the dramatic critic of the Free Press, a position he has held beyond the memory of many players among the mass of the theatre that for many years has recognized in him one of the most scholarly, kindly and philosophic and encouraging of American writers on stage subjects.

John Mason came over from Philadelphia, where he is with Mrs. Fiske's company, last Sunday night to be one of the guests of the Pleiades Club at the opening of their Winter's season of Sunday nights.

The opening of The White Cat at the New Amsterdam Theatre has been postponed until Nov. 2.

The cast of Leo Ditrichstein's new farce, Before and After, is now complete and includes Thomas A. Wise, Fritz Williams, Katherine Florence, Kenyon Bishop, Jean Newcombe, Lucille Watson, Mabel Findlay and Mr. Ditrichstein.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Pitney (Louise Gunning) at New York City on Oct. 19. The baby is to be named Louise Adelaide.

George C. Tyler, of Liebler and Company, sailed Wednesday morning on the Deutschland, taking with him Eugene Presbrey, whose services will be required in making preparations for the London opening of Kyrle Bellew in Raffles, which is now fixed for March 18. Mr. Tyler is contemplating quite a long automobile tour while he is on the other side, and Mr. Presbrey will accompany him and seek recuperation from his recent long illness, from which he is now recovered.

The County Chairman, Eastern, will close in Washington next Saturday night. The Western organization will continue on tour.

Rita V. Harlan has been especially engaged by Pelton and Smutzer to head their stock company, alternating between their Denver and Salt Lake City houses. Miss Harlan left for the West last week.

Will W. Crimans joined the Curse of Drink company at the Murray Hill Theatre last week, playing the heavy successfully on three hours' notice and after one rehearsal.

B. A. Mayer, acting manager for Olga Nethersole, has been seriously ill of ptomaine poisoning at the Hotel Astor. Mr. Mayer is the husband of Dorothy Grimstone, who is in Miss Nethersole's company.

Earle Craddock has closed with The Hoosier Girl company and joins Two Little Waifs to play the lead.

Celia Campbell, late of the Cummings Stock company, is in New York.

Lottie Stareley, of May Irwin's company, was quietly married to J. H. Prather, of Dallas, Tex., at Spokane, Wash., on Oct. 9.

Grace Goodall and Georgie Cooper are with the Crescent Stock company, at Oakland, Cal.

Georgia Bryton, who has just closed a successful engagement with Fantana at the Lyric, is spending a few weeks in the Catskills.

Henry W. Savage and George Marion, his general stage director, have gone to Hot Springs, Va., where they will make preliminary arrangements for Mr. Savage's next production, Noah's Ark, a musical extravaganza. The manuscript has been in Mr. Savage's hands for some time, and both words and music were written by Clare Kummer, the author of "Dearie," "Egypt," and other popular songs.

Charles B. Hanford and his manager, F. Lawrence Walker, were recently made members of King Solomon Lodge of Masons in Washington, D. C.

John C. Fowler is seriously ill with typhoid fever in a hospital in Bradford, Pa.

Frank Mordaunt is very ill at the Elks' Home in Virginia.

Nat Jones has regained his health and is acting this week at the Empire Theatre in Boston.

Stella Beardsley, late of The Pearl and the Pumpkin, has been engaged to play the part of Countess Pokota in It Happened in Nordland, at Lew Fields' Theatre.

Nestor Lennon has been engaged as a member of Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre Stock company. He will make his first appearance next week in Lady Windermere's Fan.

Daniel Harkins, author of The White Squadron, The Midnight Alarm and many other successful plays, is ill at his home in New York, suffering with a paralytic stroke.

Madame Modjeska will begin her season at Pittsburgh on Nov. 6.

George Edwardes' musical comedy company from the Apollo, London, arrived on the Umbria yesterday. In the company were Mr. and Mrs. John Le Hay, Ruth and Agnes Vincent, Miss Valli Valli, and Aubrey Fitzgerald.

John Philip Sousa, Jr., son of the bandmaster, and Eileen Adams, daughter of Mrs. Maria A. Adams, were married yesterday at the Church of the Holy Sacrament, New York city.

Mabel Gordan, of Paris, is visiting her mother, Mrs. John Chamberlin, in New York city.

"Aunt Louisa" Eldridge helped entertain the guests at the Squirrel Inn on the Bowery last Tuesday.

Laura Davis recently underwent a serious surgical operation at her home in White Oaks, Mankato, Minn. She is slowly recovering and will return to New York when able.

Harry Levy, who went to Denver last August, troubled with a throat affliction, is advised by his Denver physicians to return East, as the Colorado altitude is too high for him. Mr. Levy left for Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 22, and expects to spend the Winter there.

Frank Eldredge was married last week in the Church of the Incarnation, New York city, to Gertrude Ethel Carter, of Montreal.

W. T. CHATTERTON.

Above is an excellent character portrait of W. T. Chatterton, who is playing this season the role of Tank in Texas. He has received much press commendation for his work in this character, from which the following are a few extracts:

W. T. Chatterton does good work as the cowboy, Tank.—Milwaukee Free Press, October 9, 1905.

W. T. Chatterton is really excellent. He has the vocabulary, the tone and the mannerism of the typical Southwestern cowboy.—Buffalo Evening News, September 5, 1905.

W. T. Chatterton as Tank was vigorous and kindly. —Chicago Daily News, October 5, 1905.

Among the best liked people in Texas is Tank, an old time Westerner, who W. T. Chatterton impersonates well. He is a splendid, rough and ready, rollicking cowboy, willing to eat, drink or fight at the drop of the hat.—Detroit News, September 18, 1905.

Mr. Chatterton impersonates a derelict of the rough old days beautifully.—Chicago Record-Herald, October 6, 1905.

IN BROOKLYN THEATRES.

Otis Skinner is seen at Teller's Broadway Theatre this week in His Grace de Grammont. Laura Hope Crews is the leading woman, and others in the cast are Arthur Forrest, Charles Welles, Robert Peyton Carter, William Rosell and Helen Ware.

Sam Bernard appears at the Montauk in The Rollicking Girl. Hattie Williams still has the title-role, and altogether the production is the same as that which for six months was a success at the Herald Square, Manhattan.

At the Majestic this week Nat M. Wills is seen in Mr. Duke of Duluth. A large chorus is in evidence and the songs are catchy and spirited.

The musical comedy, Tom, Dick and Harry, with George Bickel, Harry Watson, Jr., and Edward Wrothe as the stars, is the offering at the Grand Opera House.

The Four Mortons are Breaking Into Society at the Folly Theatre this week.

Cecil Spooner is the star at the Bijou this week, in the comedy Mam'selle. Miss Spooner appears in the double role of a French milliner and a singer. The entire company supports her and the Delmar Brothers appear in a trick comedy and barrel-jumping act between the scenes.

Why Women Sin is Corse Payton's attraction at his Lee Avenue Theatre. Etta Reed Payton is seen in a congenial role and she is surrounded by the entire company.

The production of The White Caps at Phillips' Lyceum this week is one of the best presented by the stock company this season. Emma Bell and William C. Holden have the stellar roles.

Fred Irwin's big show is the attraction at the Star. The Barrison Sisters head the bill, and the others are the six Rastelbinders, W. S. Harvey and company, Elsa Bohen, Devine and Williams, and Sisters De Faye, Carlton and Zeno. The Only Pebble on the Beach is the burlesque number.

Miner's Bohemians are seen at the Alcazar in a good olio and an attractive vaudeville bill. Terry McGovern is billed to appear Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

The New Avenue Girls, a comedy company, are seen in a musical comedy at the Nassau. The Goddess of the Moon, and A Night in Bohemia are the extravaganzas and Herbert Brooks and company in a new skit is the special feature.

The Gayety has The High Rollers. They made things lively at the Star last week.

Burlesque by the Reilly and Woods company is the entertainment at the Unique.

THE IRVING OBSEQUIES.

The Great Actor's Ashes Laid in Westminster Abbey—The Flower of Distinguished Life at the Funeral—Memorial Tokens.

With the supreme honor the English nation can pay its dead, the ashes of Sir Henry Irving were laid in Westminster Abbey last Friday close beside those of that other great actor, David Garrick, and guarded by the statue of their master, Shakespeare.

The impressive services were conducted in the presence of a congregation which included representatives of all the dead actor's friends, from kings to men in the humblest walks of life. King Edward was represented by General Sir Dighton Probyn, Keeper of the Privy Purse, and the Prince of Wales by Lieutenant-Colonel William H. P. Carrington, Controller of the Prince's Household, while Cabinet Ministers and Ambassadors were present in person. Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, who was visiting in Scotland, came to London to testify America's regard. Every prominent actor in London was there, and dramatists, authors and artists formed part of the audience. Sir Conan Doyle, Sir Francis Burnand, John S. Sargent, Ellen Terry, Alfred Austin, Lord Tennyson, Lord Knollys, the Earl of Aberdeen, Sir William Goschen, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Pinero were among those who were seated in the Abbey. Hundreds stood within the church and thousands more stood patiently outside and listened to the passing bell till the service was over.

At twelve o'clock the procession of clergy, mourners and choir came from the Chapel of St. Faith, the choir singing "Brief Life is Here Our Portion." Before this a series of funeral marches, Chopin's, Purcell's, and Schubert's, had been played by Sir Frederick Bridges, organist of Westminster.

The procession passed through the nave to the space between the choir and the sanctuary, where the coffin, draped with a laurel pall, was placed on a white pedestal. After the psalm, "Lord, Thou Hast Been Our Dwelling Place," the lesson was read by Canon Duckworth, sub-Dean of Westminster, who was assisted in the service by Bishop Welldon, Archdeacon Wilberforce, and Canon Hensley Henson. The anthems were "Crossing the Bar" and "Weep Ye Not for the Dead." After the anthems the coffin was borne to the grave in the Poets' Corner, while the organ played the funeral march from Coriolanus.

The chief mourners were Lady Irving, Henry B. Irving, and Laurence Irving, their wives, and a grandson of Sir Henry. The pallbearers were Sir Squire Bancroft, Lord Aberdeen, Lord Tennyson, Sir Charles Wyndham, John Hare, Lord Burnham, Sir Alexander Campbell Mackenzie, George Alexander, Beerbohm Tree, Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema, Sir James Dewar, Johnston Forbes-Robertson, Arthur Wing Pinero, William Ashmead Burdett-Coutts, and Arthur Collins.

When the concluding portion of the service was over the procession filed back to the choir. A hymn was sung and the benediction pronounced. The roll of the organ and of muffled drums announced the beginning of the "Dead March" in Saul, and silently the congregation left the Abbey.

But four of the mass of floral pieces sent by the admirers of Sir Henry had place on the coffin. One of these was a cross of lilies from Queen Alexandra, bearing the words, "To Sir Henry Irving from the Queen—'Into Thy hands, O Lord, into Thy hands!'" Another was a white cross from Sir Henry's children and grandchildren. Suitable floral pieces were sent by the Association of Theatre Managers of Greater New York, by Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Samuel M. Clemens, John Laurence Toole, the Actors' Association and many other organizations and individuals. Ellen Terry sent a shield of pansies and rosemary, inscribed, "'That's for remembrance.' To the great actor, Henry Irving, in Hamlet. From Ellen Terry." A fund in charge of a committee consisting of John Drew, James K. Hackett, E. H. Sothern, Francis Wilson, and Henry Miller, representing contributions from American actors and actresses, was used to purchase a Victory wreath of orchids to be placed on the bier.

From the home of Baroness Burdett-Coutts, where the remains had lain after they were brought to London, all the way to Westminster Abbey on Thursday crowds lined the streets and stood hatless as the simple hearse and one carriage passed along. The body had been incinerated that morning at a private crematorium and the ashes placed in a casket. The hearse and carriage passed through the Dean's yard at the Abbey to the entrance of the cloisters, where they were received by Archdeacon Wilberforce and Canons Duckworth and Henson. The Dean was ill and unable to be present. A brief prayer was said by Canon Duckworth in St. Faith's Chapel, where the coffin rested, surrounded by lighted tapers, until the funeral Friday. Before the body was cremated George J. Frampton, R.A., the sculptor, made a successful cast of the actor's features.

Several movements are afoot to establish suitable memorials to Sir Henry. Seymour Hicks suggested that the theatres of the United Kingdom give to a memorial fund half the proceeds of their performances on some date, and that performers give one night's salary. The fund, he suggests, should be applied to endowing a bed in every hospital in the kingdom.

A. F. Hartz, proprietor of the Euclid Avenue Opera House, in Cleveland, has started a national movement to erect a monument as a testimonial of America's appreciation of the English actor's work for the stage. A meeting in regard to the movement will be held in New York to-morrow (Wednesday).

The Lotos Club of New York sent the following message to Bram Stoker:

"Lotos Club shares universal grief over loss of Irving, prince of actors, great-hearted man."

In reply to messages from the Association of Theatrical Managers and the Actors' Fund Sir Charles Wyndham has sent the following cablegrams to Daniel Frohman:

"Heartfelt thanks from committee to Actors' Fund of America. Their sympathy deeply appreciated."

"Committee touched with the kind and gracious sympathy of Managers' Association of America. Their message has been conveyed to family, who are most grateful."

Mr. Hackett, representing the actors of America, who sent a wreath of orchids to the tomb of Sir Henry, has received the following message:

"Sir Charles Wyndham and committee send greetings and grateful thanks to the actors of America through you. Wreath beautiful."

The following resolutions were adopted by the Actors' Society of America at a special meeting:

Whereas, The Supreme Power, the great overruling Director of the universe, has removed by death the late Sir Henry Irving from the field of earthly activities, and

Whereas, We hold that in the death of Sir Henry Irving the dramatic profession throughout the English spoken language has lost a genius whose labors have raised the modern stage to the distinguished position of true art; a man whose constant effort was for the best and noblest in his profession; a man whose benevolence placed him in harmonious sympathy with the humblest of his associates and made him at once a protector and a teacher of his art; a man who, as director of dramatic work and its theatrical expression, has thus far had no superior in the English language; therefore

Resolved, That in the death of Sir Henry Irving the dramatic profession has lost its most able director, its most sincere and earnest worker for the highest evolution of dramatic art, and that we as a body of actors sincerely feel this irreparable loss.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with his bereaved family, whose Christian fortitude will enable them to bear his loss through the hope of that joyful meeting hereafter.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society as a record of its sympathy and that a copy of the resolutions be sent to the family of the late Sir Henry Irving.

H. W. BISHOP SECURES THE CENTRAL.

Harry W. Bishop, of San Francisco, has recently taken the management of the Central Theatre of that city. Mr. Bishop controls the Majestic Theatre in San Francisco and Ye Liberty Playhouse in Oakland, the two most beautiful houses on the Pacific coast. Ye Liberty is the house with a revolving stage of Mr. Bishop's own invention. The Central will pass under the new management Nov. 27. It will be closed until the holidays and thoroughly renovated. With new decorations and furnishings it will open again as a melodramatic house. No change will be made in its policy at present. With these three stock houses under his personal management Mr. Bishop is in a position to secure the best dramatic material on the market.

THE LONDON STAGE.

Irving as an Old Friend Knew Him—His Kindliness and Charity—Theatrical News.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

LONDON, Oct. 14.

It is with a heavy heart and with deepest sorrow that I am compelled to recommence my MIRROR letter in order to refer to the sad news (already, of course, flashed to you by cable) of the death of the greatest actor of our time and one of the noblest hearted men that ever lived—namely Sir Henry Irving. The tidings of his sudden death last night at Bradford just after his performance of Becket and announced in this morning's papers have come as a shock to the entire English speaking world. Not only had Irving, by the hardest of work since his boyhood, won for himself the highest honors in the modern drama, but he had also gained the love and affection of large numbers of the best people in all departments of life far outside of the profession which he loved with a devotion that I have never seen in any one of the whole army of actors whom I have known since my childhood's days.

It was in my merest youth that I first met Irving personally, and what he did then was of a piece with all the remainder of his life—namely, a kind, gentle deed. This I have always remembered gratefully, although it had entirely faded from his memory until I chanced to remind him of it the very last time I met him, which was just as he was starting on what was to be his last tour, a fortnight ago.

I was but a boy working around the theatres at that time and Irving was impersonating the most bloodthirsty of villains at the old Queen's Theatre in Long Acre. For many years past it has been my privilege to know Sir Henry Irving more intimately than most people have known him, and in all those years I have never known him neglect an opportunity of doing good to others. Indeed, he would go out of his way to seek opportunities for relieving the distressed and the dying not only in his own profession but also in every other walk of life.

When I saw my beloved friend at his delightful flat in Stratton street, Piccadilly, a few weeks back, surrounded by his rare theatrical books and the old actor's portraits, of which he was proud, he was somewhat pale and troubled with a cough. Still, he seemed likely to go on enjoying life for a good many years to come, and Irving was a man who really did enjoy life, for his enthusiasm and his optimism were boundless.

On my warning him that he had been working too hard, he replied with that gentle and strangely fascinating smile of his that he hoped to get a little rest when he retired a few years hence, when he would put in a little time in preparing his reminiscences. For that book Sir Henry had, as he showed me, collected a mass of deeply interesting material, extraordinary letters and so forth, covering a large number of his fellow great folk in all departments of art, literature and politics. Whoever may take up the work of the book it can never possess the charm, the quaint and often touching life-vision that the great actor could have put into it.

As in the case of many of the great lights of the stage, especially those of a preceding generation (for many nowadays step on the boards without study and preparation and with their living already assured), Irving's career, set down in mere detail, would read like a romance. Only those intimate with the noble man, this "heart of gold," knew what Irving had gone through from the time when, in 1856, dropping his first name, John, and his surname, Brodribb, he made his debut as a mere lad at the Lyceum, Sunderland, until some twelve years later he met with his old friend Toole, then his benefactor. Irving's struggles against rebuffs, disappointments, and poverty, his tramps from town to town, acting, singing, reciting and lecturing on the road, were not unlike those experienced by the great little Edmund Kean. "Marvellous man Kean must have been," said Sir Henry to me, almost the last time I sat with him. "Pity he died so young, and all through gin." And then he related how an ancestor of his gracious friend and early Lyceum helper, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, had called to see Kean, and finding that he loved gin, sent him a big case of that ardent liquor. On being remonstrated with for encouraging the great little tragedian in the drink habit the sender remarked: "I thought if he must have gin he'd better have the best."

Yes, few people know what Irving went through from the time he got his notice in the first week of his stage career until even after his first London appearance—that is, his first in an important part at the St. James, in 1866. Soon after that he joined Toole at the old Queen's, in Long Acre, and at the old Gaiety, and the now defunct Strand, and afterward toured with him in the suburban and provincial theatres. Often have I seen Irving on this tour playing several parts per night, and then throw in a recitation. Next week I propose to tell you a few little stories of Irving.

With regard to dear, lovable old Irving I can now only stop to add that almost his very last words to me at the above mentioned meeting were full of joyful anticipation of his projected fresh visit to America, where, as he added, he had always received such overwhelming kindness. Strange that the last words this truly reverent great man spoke on the stage last night in Becket were, "Into Thy hands, O Lord, into Thy hands!"

As I write I hear from the Waldorf that the Shuberts' production of Light Out, due at that theatre to-morrow night with Sir Henry's eldest son, H. B., in the leading part, has very naturally been postponed.

And now for just a few grouped up mems of the week's proceedings, leaving sundry plays and other matters to be more fully treated than they can be now in this hastily and tragically interrupted letter.

The new and beautiful Empire reopened last Monday amid general rejoicings and with a big bill, including a new revue written by George Grossmith, Jr., and entitled Rogues and Vagabonds (meaning, of course, actors as described under the old act of Parliament), and with a fine new ballet called The Bugle Call, with that marvelous terpsichorean, Adeline Genie, as the principal dancer.

Arthur Bourchier duly presented The Merchant of Venice at the Garrick on Wednesday. In this, the first Shakespearean play ever produced at that theatre, A. B. scored as Shylock, although he was somewhat modern and thereby reminded yours truly of the late Charles Coghlan's extraordinary "drawing-room" kind of Shylock at the Bancrofts' old Prince of Wales' Theatre thirty years ago, when the greatest Portia of modern times, meaning Ellen Terry, made her first appearance in that character. Bourchier's is, however, a deeply interesting performance, and so is the Portia of his brilliant wife, Violet Vanbrugh, although she, too, savored of "modernity." The general cast is strong and the mise-en-scene is truly beautiful.

Richard Claude Carton's new comedy, Public Opinion, has just been produced at Wyndham's. For the present I must content myself by saying that it has scored a big success, whereof we are all glad. I propose also to relate that Forbes-Robertson started a most successful revival of For the Crown at the new and beautiful Scala Theatre on Tuesday. F.-R.'s next new production at that precious playhouse will be a comedy written by the bright and brainy Madeleine Lucette Ryley and entitled Mrs. Grundy.

To-night Lewis Waller is to make his reappearance in London in Alfred Sutro's new play, formerly called The Way of a Fool, but recently renamed The Perfect Lover.

GAWAIN.

TO FREE THE THEATRE.

Another Shubert Corporation—Detroit's Offer—Comments of the Press.

Articles of incorporation were filed in Albany last week for the Shubert Theatrical Company, with a capital of $300,000. The directors are Lee Shubert, J. Shubert, Joseph W. Jacobs, and William Klein. This incorporation was formed to facilitate the erection of theatres in cities where the independents have not yet been able to enter, and is the result of the agreement between the Shuberts and Joseph L. Rhinock and Max Anderson, of Cincinnati, announced in last week's MIRROR. Congressman Rhinock and Mr. Anderson will have no interest in the Shubert ventures, but will devote their capital to the theatre building side. J. M. Allison, of Cincinnati, who has been connected with newspapers in that city and in Louisville, Ky., will be the active representative of Messrs. Rhinock and Anderson.

Negotiations are now nearing completion for theatres in two cities that have not yet been mentioned.

F. K. Stearns, millionaire president of the Detroit Orchestral Association, was in New York recently in conference with independent managers relative to the construction in Detroit of a $500,000 music hall.

"Since the Theatrical Trust barred Mrs. Carter, Miss Bates, David Belasco, Mrs. Fiske, Sarah Bernhardt and other stars from the city," said Mr. Stearns, "Detroit sentiment is against it, and the citizens who enjoy good plays are willing to back a movement to help them. A wealthy man, devoted to music, recently expressed willingness to build a fine music hall to accommodate orchestras and I suggested that we might present plays as well as music. He fell in with the scheme.

"We are now waiting to see whether the anti-theatrical syndicate will join us. Messrs. Shubert, Fiske and Belasco have agreed to book the old Lafayette Theatre for five years, but if this can be turned into a popular-priced house we will come to an agreement with the managers. In this event we will build the hall at once on theatre lines, with loges in place of boxes. We have a site and are ready to go ahead."

Mr. Stearns said that the hall would be endowed and would not be constructed to make money, although an effort will be made to make it pay. It is likely that almost all the stock will be taken by the gentleman back of the deal, though other prominent citizens may take a small part of the risk.

Plans for the new Sam S. Shubert Theatre to be erected in Kansas City have been completed. The location is at the corner of Baltimore Avenue and Tenth Street, with the main entrance on Tenth Street. The auditorium and stage will occupy the first, second and third floors of a fifteen-story office building.

The Independents have completed negotiations for a site within one block of Fourth and Walnut Streets, on which will be erected one of the handsomest theatres in the South, the cost of the site of the theatre to be $250,000. At the beginning of the next theatrical season the new playhouse will have been placed in commission.

Editorial sentiment throughout the country shows signs of considerable satisfaction on the part of those dissatisfied with the Trust methods of treating theatres and at the progress being made by the Independents. Below are some of the comments recently published:

The following is part of an editorial published in the Scranton Tribune: "The announcement that the Shubert-Belasco-Fiske theatrical combination has been making rapid progress of late in the way of securing new theatres in which their attractions and the enterprises of other managers may have opportunities for existence will no doubt be received with pleasure by all admirers of the drama. While the public in general has probably taken but little interest in the theatrical war, save in extending the sympathy that is usually bestowed upon the under dog in a conflict, the result against the big Syndicate that has ruled the amusement world with a hand of iron so long is looked upon with gratification."

That Richmond and Norfolk, Va., will become three-night stand cities as soon as the Independent theatres in those cities are ready is looked forward to in the Norfolk Pilot as follows: "Ever since the announcement that Norfolk was to have an Independent theatre a number of people have stated that such a thing was hardly probable because of the fact that it would not pay the Independents to build a new theatre for a one-night stand, and at the same time it was pointed out that there would be no other theatre in this section of the country available. By building a theatre in Richmond all this check and delay is obviated and the movement now has every chance of success."

The Buffalo Commercial feels the dearth of entertainment in that city. It says: "There appears to be a falling off in the dramatic attractions. The Trust is not bringing out new pieces that appeal to the more intelligent and critical in the audiences. Something in the way of reform may come out of the crusade that is headed by Mr. Metcalfe."

This is from the Providence Sunday Journal: —"A big change has come over Providence theatre-goers in the last three or four years," said the man who used to be known as one of the most constant of Providence playhouse attendants. "Nearly every one of the regulars that I once knew has almost completely overcome the weekly habit. The Syndicate is at the bottom of it all. The Theatrical Trust has not been sending enough attractions consecutively to this city to hold the interest of the old patrons. Last winter the Providence Opera House was dark for several nights at a time. The result has been that the men and women who used to look forward from week to week for the coming attractions have been so often disappointed that they have finally become discouraged. They have turned to other forms of amusement, such as bridge whist or calling upon and receiving their friends, and the new interests have demanded much of their attention.

"I wish something could be done to improve the Syndicate if it cannot be broken, as I think it can with a little capital and much courage. A free theatre in fifteen or eighteen large cities would insure independent companies engagements throughout the season, and that is all that is necessary to make the Trust behave. What a lucky thing it would be for Providence if we could have a free house here!"

The North Adams correspondent of the Springfield Republican comments on the theatrical situation in that city with a good deal of satisfaction. He says: "The theatre-goers of this city and vicinity have reason to be pleased and are pleased with the prospects for the season, as the attractions of the Shubert-Belasco-Fiske Independent Association are to be presented here in competition with the old Theatrical Syndicate, which has practically monopolised this field long enough. The standard of the latter's attractions have been lowered rather than raised, with the result that people who appreciate theatrical productions of the first class are happy to know that relief is at hand. There is consequently much satisfaction in the knowledge that this city is included in the field of the new association's operations. It finds here in the Richmond a theatre second to none, and in the hands of a most competent manager. Under the circumstances there is reason to anticipate one of the most successful theatrical seasons in the history of the city."

FREDERIC W. THOMPSON A DRAMATIST.

Frederic W. Thompson, of Thompson and Dundy, who finds time hanging heavy on his hands now that he has successfully launched The Romance of a Hindoo Princess at the Hippodrome, has decided to turn dramatist. He has secured the rights to George Barr McCutcheon's novel, "Brewster's Millions," and will spend his leisure hours during the Winter in the task of dramatizing it into a three-act comedy. The play will be ready for production in April, and will be staged and sent out under Mr. Thompson's personal direction.

A THEATRE BURNED.

The opera house at Ridgway, Pa., was totally destroyed by fire Saturday night, Oct. 21.

OBITUARY.

James J. Brown died on Sunday, Oct. 8, at the family cottage on Union Avenue, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., of tuberculosis. His last appearance was in William A. Brady's revival of Siberia, when he ably portrayed the character of Ivan. Toward the end of the season he was obliged to leave owing to ill health, and with the rest of his family went to the Grand Union Hotel, Saratoga Springs, where he remained until it closed, after which he moved to a cottage on Union avenue, where he died. Although still young, being only twenty-two, Mr. Brown had ample opportunity to display his ability, and through his death the stage loses one of its most promising members. He was probably the youngest actor ever to attempt the difficult role of Orlando, having been engaged by Ernest Shipman as co-star in As You Like It at the age of nineteen. His manly, forceful performance of Orlando was warmly received and praised by the critics, particularly throughout the West. The funeral took place Thursday morning, Oct. 12, at All Saints' Church, New York City, where a solemn high mass was celebrated at eleven o'clock.

Mrs. Sarah G. Le Moyne, first wife of William J. Le Moyne, died at her home at Onset Bay, Mass., on Oct. 19. She had been unconscious for three days. The body was taken to Mount Auburn Cemetery yesterday for cremation. In the custody of a near friend she left a dispatch to be sent upon her death to Mr. Le Moyne, who is in New York. During the last year she disposed of her property by will. Among other things she sent to Mr. Le Moyne a valuable collection of oil paintings. She was a follower of spiritualism for a number of years, but renounced it and returned to her former faith, Unitarianism. She was the creator of the rôle of Mrs. St. Claire in the first Uncle Tom's Cabin company. While playing in this company she met and married Mr. Le Moyne. In 1886 she and Mr. Le Moyne were divorced and she then added her maiden surname, always writing her name as Sarah Green Le Moyne. She was born in Toronto, Canada, and first appeared on the stage in Buffalo. She was seventy-three years old on Oct. 16.

Hamilton Harris, at one time a well-known leading man, dropped dead from heart failure at his home in Rahway, N. J., on Sunday, Oct. 15. Mr. Harris was a member of the theatrical profession for thirty-five years, playing leading business with such people as Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth, John McCullough, Madame Modjeska and Mary Anderson. For the last five years he played only occasionally, devoting most of his time to play writing and other literary work. Mr. Harris' brother, William Harris, is now playing leads with Viola Allen. Mr. Harris leaves a widow, but no children. He was only fifty years old and up to the time of his death was in the best of health. His funeral took place on Oct. 18. The interment was in the Harrison plot, Woodlawn Cemetery, New York City.

The remains of the late Mrs. Alma E. Stutts (Elodie Le Comte), who died in Manti, Utah, five years ago from the effects of burns received by the explosion of red fire, have been removed to the family plot in Cave Hill Cemetery, Louisville, Ky. The remains were taken in charge by the Queen Esther Chapter, No. 1, Order of Eastern Star, of Louisville. The family of the late Mrs. Stutts wishes to thank the many professional friends who have kindly visited and placed flowers on the grave at different times.

Charles P. Patterson, an old-time manager, died at his home in Central Islip, L. I., on Oct. 13, after an illness of more than a year. Mr. Patterson was well known throughout the country as manager of his own companies in Rip Van Winkle, The Flying Dutchman and several operas and extravaganzas. He is survived by his wife, formerly known as Frances Parker, and by two sons and a daughter, Stella May, all professionals. The funeral was held on Oct. 16 and burial was at Central Islip.

Charles W. Boyd, business manager for Alice Fischer in The School for Husbands, died at Blessing Hospital, Quincy, Ill., on Oct. 17, of gastritis. Mr. Boyd was well known in the theatrical and newspaper business, having been dramatic editor of the New York Press for several years, and connected with various road companies. He leaves a wife and one son in New York. The body was sent to his father's home, at Amsterdam, N. Y., for burial.

Louise, Baroness Von Schoenfeld, long a noted character in Vienna, died there on Oct. 19, at the age of eighty-eight. She was a famous actress as a young woman, and the most popular player at the Hofburg from 1839 to 1856. She married Baron Karl Schoenfeld in the latter year, and from that time held a conspicuous place in Viennese society.

Hernandez Monte, who has been gallery doorkeeper at the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, for more than fifteen years, died on Oct. 19. Mr. Monte in his prime was an actor of repute, but was incapacitated by illness and obliged to give up active work. He was then given the place at the Grand, which he filled up to the time of his death.

Thomas Taylor, treasurer for John Griffith's company, died in the City Hospital in Lima, Ohio, from a stroke of paralysis Oct. 19.

THE MIRROR will be published for the week on Monday, Nov. 6.

A NOBLE RECORD.

THE death of every great actor that the world has known has been deplored as a calamity. An actor but modestly gifted gives pleasure, in the course of his career, to a vast number of persons. Moreover, if his mediums are worthy, he uplifts and impulses his public. But the actor truly great, more than almost any other person prominently projected, leaves a vacancy that never can be filled when he passes from the world's view. The great poet, or the great story-teller, or the great painter, leaves his work to delight and inspire the world after he has departed. The great actor makes his exit as he would in a play, takes with him the means and substance of his charm and appeal, and has nothing but tradition to keep his memory.

THE MIRROR this week publishes a few of the more prominent tributes of leading newspapers to the memory of HENRY IRVING. They represent shades of appreciation that come to their writers in the stress of the moment, but they are meagre and inadequate to describe the true and more valuable suggestions of appreciation that will come with reflection.

There is also printed in THE MIRROR a list of the characters that IRVING assumed during his long and constantly active life as a player. The list, which is not complete, still serves to impress a profound lesson on any young player of this time who is earnest and studious.

The average actor, strutting in the intervals of his work where he may hear compliments for isolated and infrequent impersonation that may attract a moment's attention, should look on this list of IRVING'S characterizations and become modest. IRVING'S success was no result of occasional effort, undertaken after long preparation and magnified out of its place in the perspective of the theatre, but the result of perhaps the most prodigious labor that the modern stage has ever known. During his first three years in the theatre this man played something like four hundred parts, and during his career he impersonated probably a thousand characters. Well may the average actor stand dumb and amazed as he peruses this record.

In all but actors of the better class indolence and carelessness are characteristics. It is only the great actors that set new standards in study, in activity and in achievement. It is the same, in effect, in any field of endeavor. There are but few geniuses that permanently live in their work on the inspiration of the moment, while failing to labor steadily and practice and study. Your successful man in any walk is one whose whole idea is to master everything that confronts him in his field. Such a man was IRVING, and there is no better lesson for the young and ambitious of the theatre than that furnished by the history of what he did, what he suffered, and the broad success that he achieved.

THE QUESTION NOT SETTLED.

NEWSPAPER reports and comments on a Supreme Court decision in Pennsylvania recently in a case relating to the rights that a theatre ticket carries proceed on the assumption that the court settled the question finally and that various other controversies along similar lines may be assumed to have been determined by the decision.

The case was heard at Pittsburgh, and the sitting judge passed upon a question that various other cases—notably that of Mr. METCALFE in New York—do not involve, it would seem. In the Pittsburgh case the plaintiff brought an action in trespass for damages for alleged "inconvenience, annoyance and humiliation" suffered by him and his family because they did not receive seats for which they held a group of tickets to a theatrical performance. After the tickets had been sold and the performance advertised the special fire commission of Philadelphia, where the theatre was located, directed that the aisles of the theatre be widened. A rearrangement of the seats was necessary, because one had to be taken from each row; and thus the holder of one of the seats, the plaintiff, was ousted from the privilege he had paid for, and was unwilling to take other seats offered to him or to accept his money back. Of course the change in the seating of the theatre was ordered by public officials, in the public interest, and thus the court would uphold the defendant managers, as they were upheld in this case.

The judge in this case declared that the proprietor of a theatre is a private individual, engaged "in a strictly private business, which, though for the entertainment of the public, is always limited to those whom he may agree to admit to it," and that "there is no duty, as in the case of a common carrier, to admit every one who may apply and be willing to pay for a ticket, for the theatre proprietor has acquired no particular rights and privileges from the State, and therefore is under no implied obligation to serve the public."

This would seem to be inconsistent even in the circumstances of this case, where the officials of Philadelphia regarded the theatre as a public place—not as a private place—with obligations to the public which they enforced by causing the seating arrangements to be changed. Moreover, there have been other Supreme Court decisions, quoted in the past by THE MIRROR, in which judges have at least called a theatre a "semi-public" institution, with obligations to the public quite different from those that relate to private or parlor entertainment. The ruling of the highest court on these questions is yet to be made.

AMONG THE DRAMATISTS.

The Clyde Fitch plays will be published by the Macmillan Company simultaneously in this country and in England. The first two plays to be issued in book form will be The Climbers and The Girl with the Green Eyes, both of which, at the request of Professor Phelps, of Yale, will be included in the curriculum of the New Haven university and will be a part of the course on dramatic literature for the senior class. These are the first plays by a modern American playwright to be studied at Yale. Mr. Fitch has also been invited by Professor Phelps to speak before the Yale students this Winter. Following the publication of these plays Macmillan will publish Her Great Match, in which Maxine Elliott is now playing; Her Own Way, in which she played last season; The Stubbornness of Geraldine, and The Toast of the Town, the play in which Viola Allen is appearing. The other plays will be published in due course.

"The Vicar of Wakefield" has been selected as the subject for a light romantic opera, and Lisa Lehmann has composed music for a book and lyrics which have been written by Laurence Housman. This work is to be produced during the present season in America by David Bispham, who has acquired all English and American rights in the opera, and who will himself appear in the character of the Vicar.

PERSONAL

HANBURY.—Lily Hanbury, the English actress, and her husband, Mr. Guedalla, have gone to South Africa, where they will remain for the next six months.

JONES.—Henry Arthur Jones will arrive from England to-morrow on the Oceanic for a three weeks' visit. He is bringing the manuscripts of two new plays.

SOTHERN-MARLOWE.—The plans of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe for next season include productions of As You Like It, King Lear and Cymbeline. Percy Mackay's Fenris the Wolf may also be produced.

JOHNSON.—Elizabeth Johnson, daughter of Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland, is to be starred as soon as a suitable play can be found.

LANE.—Charles Lane, who last season originated the part of the Physical Culture Professor in Mrs. Black Is Back, has been engaged by David Belasco to play Col. Villiers in Sweet Kitty Bellairs, opening November 6.

HOLLAND.—E. M. Holland will be the only American member of Kyrle Bellew's company in Raffles when the play is produced in London next spring.

THOMAS.—Augustus Thomas and his family will sail for Paris next Saturday. Mr. Thomas will remain abroad probably until next spring, when he will come back with another budget of plays.

O'CONNOR.—Mrs. T. P. O'Connor sails tomorrow, October 25, for England. Last Friday afternoon she read her historical play, The Lost Leader, founded on the career of the great Irish leader, Parnell, in the library of St. Leo's Church to Father Ducey, Miss Van Buren, David Belasco and Alfred Allen.

MANSFIELD.—Richard Mansfield has obtained one set of the Escurial tapestry panels to be used for the tableau curtains in the production of Don Carlos. The five panels were at the Paris Exposition of 1900, and five copies were woven afterward for each country.

SIMS.—George R. Sims, the dramatist, whose brilliant writing has delighted so many in the London Referee, is at present too ill to contribute to its clever pages.

QUINTERO.—Lamar C. Quintero, of the New Orleans Picayune, was a MIRROR visitor last week.

HENRY IRVING.

An Appreciation.

In the death of Henry Irving the stage has lost its most illustrious figure and the world has lost a great benefactor. He has died in the fullness of artistic achievement and at the summit of a spotless and splendid renown. He was in his sixty-eighth year and his career of public service extended over nearly half a century. He began poor and in a humble position, and by force of character, integrity of purpose, incessant industry, fidelity to duty and the charm of genius he raised himself to splendid eminence and he raised the dramatic profession, of which he was the most conspicuous representative, to a dignity that it had never before possessed. He was animated by the noblest form of human ambition—the wish and purpose to make his generation better and happier by excelling as an interpreter of human nature, a minister of beauty and a guide to the spiritual life. For thirty years he held the destiny of the English stage in the hollow of his hand, and during that time he presented only the greatest subjects and presented them only in the greatest manner. He touched nothing base. His energy was tremendous and his activity never made a pause. He was not only the manager of a theatre but he was in every part of the world that he visited the manager of intellect, and his influence was felt all along the line of social life. He left nothing to chance. He scrupulously regarded as well the slightest detail as the grandest design. He not only accomplished a benefit and an evolution in the painting of scenery and the setting and designing of plays, but he revived and maintained the natural method of acting—the method that makes impersonation the chief object of dramatic art. His personal charm was so great that almost all of the younger actors of his time became involuntarily imitators of his style, reproducing his peculiarities, not his powers. Those peculiarities (often erroneously designated "mannerisms") were natural to him and in him they were delightful.

His devotion to the theatre as an instrument of human advancement and happiness was religious in its feeling and passionate in its sincerity. He exemplified the dignity of his profession and he was never weary of asserting its cause. He was a great actor—certainly the greatest actor of his time—and so far as the printed records of the stage enable a studious observer to judge, he was the greatest actor that ever lived, for there is no record of any man who has played so many and such widely contrasted parts of the highest order and played them all equally well. His range included Hamlet and Jingle; Macbeth and Don Quixote; King Lear (which he considered his best performance) and Robert Macaire; Dr. Primrose, the Vicar of Wakefield, and King Louis XI; Mephistopheles and Benedick; Lesurques and Dubosc; Shylock and Dorincourt; Becket and Corporal Brewster, and Mathias in The Bells, a part in which no other actor could come within a thousand miles of him, a fabric of his own wonderful imagination, into which he poured all the fire of his generous nature and liberated the finest reserves of his soul. It was not merely the element of variety at which he aimed, the easy expedient of frequent change of bill; he acted every part, making every fibre of it vital and the whole personality true. His interest in humanity was as wide as the human mind can reach and as deep as the human heart can feel.

In his character he combined great wisdom with great simplicity. His whole being was dominated by intellect, but his sympathy extended to every suffering creature upon earth, and in practical charity his munificence was boundless. In many ways he was a lonely man—isolated in part by mental supremacy, in part by temperament and in part by circumstances of cruel personal experience—but he loved to make others happy and he gazed with eyes of benevolence on all the wide pageantry and pathos of this mortal scene. No mind more noble, no heart more tender, no spirit more pure and gentle ever came into this world. Henry Irving lived to bless mankind, and in his death, which is a universal bereavement, he leaves an immortal memory of genius and goodness and an immortal example of all that is heroic and beautiful in the conduct of life.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

[No replies by mail. No attention paid to anonymous, impertinent or irrelevant queries. No private addresses furnished. Questions regarding the whereabouts of players will not be answered. Letters to members of the profession addressed in care of THE MIRROR will be forwarded if possible.]

R. D., Red Bank, N. J.: Margaret Mather made her first appearance as a star at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Aug. 28, 1882, as Juliet, the same year that Fannie Davenport appeared for the first time on the English stage, in Toole's Theatre, as Diane, Countess of Lyn.

V. R., Baton Rouge, La.: 1. Sheridan Knowles himself directed Virginius when it was produced at the Covent Garden Theatre in 1820. 2. The celebrated Fanny Kelly opened the Soho Theatre, London, in 1840. 3. Four hundred lives were lost when the Opera Comique burned in Paris in 1887. 4. Charles Kean's last appearance on the stage was at the Prince of Wales Theatre, Liverpool, in 1873. Liston's was at the Olympic, London, 1838.

M. M. K., Kansas City: (1) In the Fortnightly Review, volume 58, page 326, you will find an article by J. H. McCarthy on Strindberg, which is probably the article to which Mr. Huneker refers. (2) John Oliver Hobbs (Mrs. Craigie) is the author of The Ambassadors. (3) Any large book seller in your city can give you information about the publishers of the plays you desire, as well as about English publications.

T. A. M., Toledo, O.: 1. There is always room in vaudeville for clever people, and while the road to success is rough and trying the prize is worth working for. While there is no great demand for straight singing acts, you may have a personality and talent that would bring you to the front and cause a demand for your services. 2. You can make Toledo your headquarters, but you will have to go to other cities to get a proper hearing. The chances are that if you get into communication with the agents of the ten-cent theatres in the West, you will get a chance to show whether you are capable of pleasing an audience or not. If you make a hit in these smaller houses you can begin to think of appealing to the more select audiences that frequent the larger theatres. 3. The average agent has no time to deal with amateurs. After you have made some reputation he will look upon you more kindly. 4. There are several towns in Ohio and Pennsylvania in which small vaudeville theatres are located. You might write to the manager in the nearest town, offering to work for a week for a very reasonable sum, and if you succeed he will be glad to give you a letter to the booking agent of the circuit, so that you may get several dates. It would be useless for you to come to New York at the start, as you might have to wait for months before getting a hearing. 5. If your appearance is against you, it would be well for you to dress as a farm hand, and advertise yourself as "the farmer-tenor," or something of that sort. Without a good appearance, the wearing of evening dress might be fatal to your chances.

PLAYGOERS DISCUSS SHAW.

Members of the New York Playgoers' Club met in the College Hall of Hotel Astor last night to listen to an address by Robert Loraine on "Bernard Shaw," and to discuss that writer and Man and Superman. Edyth Totten presided. In the audience were many well known actors and persons interested in the stage.

Mr. Loraine defended Shaw's sincerity and showed that the dramatist was not alone in his views on marriage, as set forth in Man and Superman, quoting Grant Allen and George Eliot among other writers who have expressed the same opinion. To Shaw, said Mr. Loraine, should be given the glory of reducing the truths to the understanding of the average playgoer.

R. R. Greville, who has known Shaw for fifteen years, said that he often did not understand what the author means, and that Shaw probably did not understand himself. Much of Shaw's eccentricity in dress and manner Mr. Greville believed to be posing and perhaps advertising. He said he did not know whether Shaw deserved to be called a playwright. To the company playing Man and Superman he gave most credit for the success of the play. Shaw himself he called "an untamed bull."

Others speakers were A. B. Ebin, H. P. Mawson, Isabelle Evesson, Mr. Beveridge of Man and Superman, Mattie Sheridan, Mary Stone. Jerome K. Jerome was expected, but failed to appear.

The next meeting will be held at the Imperial Hotel on Sunday, Nov. 12, when committees will be appointed to arrange for the annual dinner.

THE USHER

The Irving obsequies developed the appreciation of the world for the achievements of the dead actor as well as for his characteristics as a man. The deposition of his ashes in Westminster Abbey is an honor demanded by contemporary sentiment, and future generations will indorse and applaud it.

Not since the placing of Garrick's ashes in the Abbey, a century and a quarter ago, has an actor found repose in this historic pile. Garrick was not the first actor whose life was so honored, however, for the remains of Betterton and Mrs. Bracegirdle were there interred. Betterton died in 1710 and Mrs. Bracegirdle in 1748; and thus it is seen that at intervals for a long period England's famous players have been signally honored in obedience to the sentiment of a loving public.

There are memorials in the Abbey to players whose dust is elsewhere, and in this way also the profession of the theatre has been honored. Garrick's fame, too, is commemorated by Webber's group, prominently displayed, the actor being shown as entering from behind a curtain which he opens. In the east aisle of the Poet's Corner there is a medallion by Tyler to Barton Booth, and there are statues of Mrs. Siddons, who died in 1831, and John Kemble, who departed life in 1823. Mrs. Siddons is also represented by the picture of her as "The Tragic Muse," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Kemble is pictured as Cato by Flaxman.

The remains of sixteen distinguished persons have been placed in the cloisters of the Abbey since 1858. The best known of these were Lord Macaulay, Charles Dickens, Sir George Herschel, Edward Bulwer Lytton, Livingstone, the explorer, Charles Darwin, Robert Browning, Lord Tennyson and Gladstone.

Because Germany has perhaps the most complete repertoire and stock system known, that country would seem to be the last to find necessary the establishing of dramatic schools. Yet the Berlin correspondent of THE MIRROR chronicles such an establishment by the director of the Deutsche Theatre, his idea being to follow lines of such institutions existing in Paris and Vienna.

A Vienna professor has been put in charge of the new school, and it is said that leading German artists will give instruction to the several classes. The main project of the director, however, is said to be the training of pupils in stage management. But all that relates to the art of the theatre will no doubt be touched upon in the system of the school.

A matter of interest on this subject is found in the recent action of MM. de Ferandy and Le Bargy, who have resigned their posts as professors in the Paris Conservatoire. These artists say that talent should not be cramped by routine, and their resignations, which have caused something like a sensation in their professional circle, are the outcome of new regulations formed for the Conservatoire. One of these calls for the regular attendance of each professor at the classes which they are supposed to instruct. De Ferandy and Le Bargy claim that their presence in the classroom is unnecessary, as the pupils may learn as much or more from witnessing their acting as they could were the professors to listen to their arbitrary lessons.

Even in the countries where dramatic art has long had preliminary method as well as active form it thus seems that the old order of things is changing. In Europe, no doubt the modern drama has had much to do with this, as it requires something different from the forms laid down from remote time by the classics and their generations of interpreters.

In this country with all the schools there is a greater lack of technical ability among young players than ever before. New requirements of the drama may have something to do with this, as they have something to do with the spirit of change abroad; but the greater cause of the common lack of stage knowledge here is to be found in the system that has abolished the best of the schools, the company or organization that performs a variety of work under the best auspices during a season, and thus renews the varied art of the experienced actor and instructs the young player.

A communication to THE MIRROR by an amateur weather prophet whose ambition it is to devise some means by which meteorological conditions may be the better arrived at in advance would seem to be hardly of a theatrical nature; yet the theatres depend upon the state of the weather almost as greatly as the farmer does in harvest time, and thus the subject is more or less pertinent.

F. R. Fast, a New York attorney and counsellor-at-law, says: "As an amateur farmer, I am interested in the weather. I have gathered meteorological data for years, but as yet have not found the slightest basis on which to ascertain the state of the weather even twelve hours ahead. The Government weather predictions are very faulty; and as many laymen claim they can predict the weather more accurately than the Weather Bureau, without any of the elaborate apparatus of the Government, I hereby appeal to all the weather prophets of this country to enter a thirty-day contest. I will give to whoever predicts the weather most accurately and will tell for the benefit of the public by what methods he arrived at his conclusions $100 cash to repay him for his trouble."

And it may be added that a grateful public, or that part of it that depends for various reasons on the weather, would greatly increase this reward by subscription, if a reliable method should be disclosed by any prognosticator.

DEATH OF FREDERICK RANKEN.

Frederick Ranken, just across the threshold of his ambition, died of typhoid fever at his home in New York city on Oct. 19. He had fought to lift musical comedy out of the rut of nonsense, and at the beginning of his success succumbed to disease, almost before he knew he had succeeded. On the opening night of Happyland he went to the theatre, against his doctor's orders. His illness was light at first, but so weakened was his constitution by hard work and worry that he was unable to resist.

Mr. Ranken was born in Troy, N. Y., thirty-six years ago. He started as a salesman in his father's linen business in Troy, and came to New York as manager of the local branch. While in Troy he was interested in local amateur theatricals, and it was not long after he arrived in the metropolis that he met Frank L. Perley, and for him rewrote and managed The Sporting Duchess. He next worked in collaboration with Kirke La Shelle, and together they produced the book of The Ameer. He rearranged many operas written by other men, notably The Runaways, a work that he disliked, but which he did well. The Jewel of Asia, The Smugglers, Nancy Brown, Happyland, and The Gingerbread Man were his other works, in order. Happyland, originally called Elysia, was written several years ago, but held until Mr. Ranken felt the public ready to receive a musical comedy of its grade. This year he was engaged by Henry W. Savage to produce a comic opera a year for four years, conjointly with Reginald De Koven.

Mr. Ranken was married only a little over a year ago. He leaves no children.

The body was taken to Troy Saturday, where the funeral was held that afternoon. Rev. George Fairlie, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, conducted the services at Earl Chapel, in Oakwood Cemetery. Among the floral tributes were pieces from Apollo Commandery, Knights Templar; New York Lodge No. 1, B. P. O. E.; The Lambs Club, Trojan Hook and Ladder company, of Troy, and other organizations.

T. NELSON DOWNS.

T. Nelson Downs, known as the "King of Koins," whose picture occupies the first page of THE MIRROR this week, entered vaudeville in 1895 in a new and original sleight-of-hand act which was a success from the start. After a tour of the larger cities of the United States Mr. Downs went to Europe in 1899 and appeared at the Palace Theatre, London, where he remained a feature of the programme for twenty-six consecutive weeks. He was then engaged for the Empire Theatre, London, for ten weeks each year for three years. During his stay abroad he appeared in all the principal French, German, Dutch and Belgian cities and in the provincial cities of Great Britain, and considered flattering offers from Australia and South America. Mr. Downs has invented and patented several illusions which he intends to introduce next season in vaudeville. This year he will confine himself to his coin specialty, with the exception of some small tricks which he will introduce. He has bookings in Europe extending into the season of 1908-09.

A CREDIT TO SODUS.

Mills Brothers, proprietors of the Sodus, N. Y., Record, conceived the idea a year ago of having the handsomest theatre in the United States for a town the size of Sodus built in that village. The leading citizens were asked what they would give for seats the opening night. An old Sodus boy, George A. Lee, the leading factor of the Transit Finance Company, of 5 Nassau Street, New York, said he would pay $500 for two seats. Several others promised a hundred dollars or more for seats. The decision was soon reached to carry out the plans, and now the walls are up and the theatre will be finished some time in January. It will cost about $30,000. It is not built as a money making scheme, but to be a credit to the town, so only three performances will be played each month. The seating capacity will be between eight hundred and nine hundred. Leon H. Lempert and Son, of Rochester, are the architects. The structure will be of stone, heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

MANAGER RAYMOND BANKRUPT.

Judge Holt, of the United States District Court, has appointed Lucien L. Bonheur receiver in bankruptcy of the assets of Melville B. Raymond, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on July 12, with liabilities of $194,545. The bond of the receiver was fixed at $10,000, and he is authorized to continue the business at his discretion, but not exceeding twenty days without further order or notice to creditors. The assets consist of producing rights of plays, and their value consists of the profits from the production. There are four companies on the road playing Buster Brown, one company playing Arizona, and one company playing The Seminary Girl. Mr. Raymond said that the companies now on the road are earning large profits, and if the tours are interrupted or the royalties not paid his rights in Buster Brown are forfeited.

SCREAMLAND.

Screamland, a burlesque of Dreamland, was a howling success when given by girls of the Teachers' College at the Thompson Memorial Building the night of Oct. 20. The different shows were managed by the following young ladies: Japanese Tea Garden, Miss Phillips; German Village, Miss Lutz; Mystic Maze, Miss Sullivan; Shoot the Chutes, Miss Gill; Turkish Candy Shop, Miss Demirs; Fighting the Flames, Miss Lisle; Bump the Bumps, Miss Burke; Indian Village, Miss Pendleton; Post Office, Miss Macdonald; Chamber of Horrors, Miss Tucker; Freak Museum, Miss Kimball; Clowns, Miss Russell. It was planned by Miss Howell, the chairman. The profits will be turned over to the Phillips Brooks Guild for charitable purposes.

NEW PLAYS FOR PROCTOR'S.

Mark Luescher, who sailed for Europe immediately after joining the forces of F. F. Proctor, returned to New York on Friday on the Amerika. He brought with him a number of plays that will be presented during the season by the Proctor Stock company. They include the version of Oliver Twist now being played by Beerbohm Tree; a new play by Alfred Sutro, author of The Walls of Jericho, and A Visitor from Vista, which is on the order of A Message from Mars. Mr. Luescher also secured an option on a London theatre for Mr. Proctor.

IRVING'S VERSATILITY.

A Partial List of the Parts He Played—Four Hundred in Two Years.

Probably no actor played more parts, or suffered more discouragements than the late Sir Henry Irving before he reached a position of eminence on the stage. "MATCHES MARY."

"Matches Mary," that pathetic figure who has so long been a part of the life of Broadway, will not be seen much longer. She has been ill in the hospital, but has resumed her weary walking and selling, although suffering constantly and almost too weak to stand. She had saved a little over a hundred dollars to be buried with self respect, but this, she says, she has had to draw upon to pay the rent while she was ill of her little room up three flights of stairs in a poor place on Seventh Avenue, that costs $7 a month. She often returns, after a night of peddling, with but a few pennies.

MRS. HACKETT HURT.

Mrs. James H. Hackett, mother of James K. Hackett, was slightly injured the night of Oct. 19 behind the scenes at the Savoy Theatre. She was standing in the wings as a scene was being struck between the first and second acts of The Walls of Jericho. A heavy mantlepiece fell and struck Mrs. Hackett on the shoulder, knocking her down. A physician was summoned and Mrs. Hackett was sent in a cab to her son's house. She was suffering mainly from shock.

"COOL" BURGESS DEAD.

"Cool" Burgess, the minstrel, died at his residence in Toronto, Canada, on Oct. 20, of dropsy. He had been living in retirement for a number of years, having accumulated a snug little fortune during the days when he was the most popular and highest-salaried minstrel on the stage. Burgess, whose Christian name was Colin, was born in Toronto Dec. 20, 1840. At a very early age he developed a talent for theatricals, and in partnership with another lad named John F. Scholes gave entertainments in his father's barn for the amusement of the neighboring children. When he left school he was apprenticed to a carriage painter, but his taste for the stage prompted him to leave the carriage shop behind and go forth to seek the laurels that came to him so abundantly later on. Before his majority he was on the road with Burgess and Green's Minstrels. Some of his fellow players at that time were Pat Redmond, Harry Collinson, and Denman Thompson. They made a successful tour of Canada, and the attention of J. H. Haverly being attracted to Burgess he and Haverly later on became partners. They made money on a tour of the United States, and played an especially long engagement at the Court Street Theatre, Brooklyn, during the season of 1864-65. John B. Stetson took such a fancy to Burgess that he signed a contract agreeing to give him a salary of $300 a week for an indefinite period, whether he played or not. Burgess was the first minstrel to receive such a high salary, and once he had reached that figure he would never work for less. A peculiarity of his that sometimes proved embarrassing to managers was his habit of demanding his pay in advance. This was his invariable rule, and he declared that he always felt more in the humor for doing good work when he knew that his money was safe in his trousers pocket.

Burgess was unique and original in every way. He is said to have been the first minstrel to introduce the long dancing shoes, and the manner in which he used them to "welt the floor" always brought down the house. Sometimes he would sit down and stick a lighted candle on the point of each shoe and read side-splitting jokes from a newspaper. He had an infectious laugh that always made a hit, even when the points of his jests were not clear to his auditors. He interested himself in many boys who were ambitious to shine as minstrels, and was instrumental in helping to further the interests of McIntyre and Heath and George Primrose, who have a grateful recollection of his kindness to them in their early struggles for recognition.

Burgess married Mrs. Edna Stephenson-Taylor, of Toronto, who survives him, and he also leaves four children, Alexander W. and Colin E. Burgess, Mrs. J. D. Chapman and Mrs. J. D. Ford. His most popular song was "Shoo Fly," which had a great vogue, owing to his quaint method of singing it. "Nicodemus Johnson" was another ditty with which his name and fame were closely identified.

W. A. BRADY'S PIRACY CASE.

William A. Brady has brought suit in the United States Court in Chicago against Michael and John Clifford and the male members of the company appearing in Without a Home on the charge of violation of the copyright law, under section 4966, which makes piracy a felony.

Without a Home, which the defendants produced at the Avenue Theatre, Chicago, during the week of Oct. 9, Mr. Brady claims is identical with "Way Down East, except that the names of the characters had been changed. After a preliminary hearing on Oct. 20, when it was acknowledged that the lines of Without a Home and "Way Down East were identical, the defendants, through their attorney, entered the plea that the piracy was not willful as provided by section 4966. The Commissioner then continued the matter until Oct. 26, to hear this peculiar proposition. The defendants since their arrest have been under bonds of $1,000 each.

It is claimed that the defendants, after their arrest and release on bond, played the piece on Saturday night, disregarding the warning of Mr. Brady. The law provides a penalty of $100 for the first performance and $50 for each subsequent performance, to go to the rightful owner of the copyright, and a further penalty of imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year. It is said that the defendants offered to settle the case by paying the penalties for ten performances, but Mr. Brady refused to consider such a proposition.

It is Mr. Brady's intention to push this case and all other cases of piracy where his plays are concerned to a final decision. He has already caused the arrest of persons in Peekskill, N. Y., and in Newark, Ohio, for offenses of the same nature. With several other producing managers he is considering the question of arranging a convention of reputable managers in the country for the purpose of forming an organization to combat piracy and the other abuses which managers suffer.

THE PLAYERS WELCOMES JOHN DREW.

John Drew's election to the presidency of The Players, in succession to the late Joseph Jefferson, was celebrated Saturday night at the Players' clubhouse with a reception.

After appearing at the Empire Theatre Mr. Drew was escorted to the clubhouse by Brander Matthews, Thomas Jefferson and Daniel Frohman. F. F. Mackay presented Mr. Drew to the company, and the new president of the club thanked the members cordially for the hearty reception. In his speech he said: "Gentlemen, this the proudest moment of my life. This honor, which has come to me unsolicited, is all the more valuable. The presidency of this representative club I regard as high an honor as can be accorded an actor."

A supper was enjoyed by about 350 of the members, among whom were E. H. Sothern, David Warfield, James K. Hackett, Raymond Hitchcock, De Wolf Hopper, Walter Hall, Robert Reid, Robert Underwood Johnson, Clarence C. Buel, David Bispham, James T. Powers, E. G. Kennedy, Louis Evan Shipman, Arnold W. Brunner, William Seymour, Howland Buckstone, Dr. F. H. Bosworth, Royal Cortissoz, Count Rossetta, James Wall Finn, Henry Clay Barnabee, E. Milton Royle and Arnold Daly.

ALICE NEILSEN ARRIVES.

Alice Nielsen arrived in New York last Sunday on the Celtic, her first visit to America in four years. This time she comes as a full fledged grand opera prima donna, ready for a long concert tour.

During this tour Miss Nielsen will be under the management of the Shuberts, an arrangement completed last Saturday. The desire of F. Ziegfeld, Jr., to remain abroad, and the fact that he could find no suitable play for Anna Held, caused him to sell his share in the project to Lee Shubert, who has been interested in the tour since last spring.

The tour will begin in Washington the first week in November. One operatic concert will be given in New York, probably at the Casino, and another with Victor Herbert's orchestra. The assisting artists are Signorina Bassani, contralto; Mario Prati, tenor; Francesco Fratodi, baritone; Giuseppe Artici, bass, and Mr. Bassecio, pianist and accompanist.

AT THE LEAGUE.

A number of guests attended the social meeting at the Professional Woman's League yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Edwin Arden, the president, and Aimee Abbott, the hostess, gracefully received. A good musical programme was arranged and presided over by Inez Crabtree. Helen Coulter sang "The Amorous Star" for a first number, and later in the afternoon gave an aria from Les Huguenots. She has a dramatic soprano of wide range and good quality. The Sisters Carmen, banjoists, were heard in a group of banjo numbers that were rendered with marvelous execution and clear expression. They won several encores. By request Inez Crabtree sang Tosti's "Goodbye." Miss Crabtree has a well cultivated voice of delightful quality, and she sings with rare intelligence and broad conception. After the programme the guests were regaled with dainty refreshments.

TRIBUTES TO IRVING.

Editorial Expressions by Various Prominent Newspapers.

New York Tribune.

What Irving was in The Bells he was in all of the many parts which he played in his long career. No man better understood what we may call the external glamor of the stage; no man was shrewder in building up the scene or in leading up to the climax which would tell across the footlights upon a miscellaneous assemblage. But what made Irving great was the fact that through his most elaborate stagecraft there shone the fire of an authentic inspiration; it was nothing to him that the splendor of his productions dazzled the groundling if at the same time he failed to touch the imagination of the most sensitive listener in the house. He never failed, for his own imagination was ever aflame, carrying him triumphantly over mannerisms of voice, gesture and gait, and making him, while the curtain was lifted, a figure no less magnetic than picturesque. The bare facts in the record of his career show how wide was his range, how he could illustrate Shakespeare or the modern drama with equal facility and success. But to those who for years watched and rejoiced in his achievements it seems as if to call him merely versatile were to underestimate the true meaning of his scope. He was much more than the ready impersonator, quick to acquire the "business" of a new part, quick to adjust himself to a new costume. Rather was he a richer and a nobler force, a fiery spirit entering into a dramatic character and making it his own until each role that he essayed seemed a positive creation. It was the poet in him, we say, that thus bore him from triumph to triumph, but his intellect was scarcely less active than was the element to which we have given the first place in his dramatic being. That he was a lifelong student of the literature of the stage was only one reason for his giving to his Shakespearean performances a scholarly elevation. He had a powerful mind and he brought to his tasks the riches that only experience and reflection can bring. Men of letters relished his work, for it was marked by the depth and the polish which the love of letters gives to a man. No one could behold his Vicar, in the play based on Goldsmith's golden book, without feeling that he had saturated himself in the spirit of that imperishable piece of English prose. In fact, Irving was born for the humanities; in his library or at one of those banquets on the stage of the Lyceum to which he was wont to summon his friends he was happiest in exchanging ideas with the finest representatives of his time. Poets, novelists, historians, scientists, men distinguished in affairs—these were the chosen companions of his leisure, and this is only another way of saying that both in public and in private life he set his mind upon high ideals.

New York Evening Post.

During the last few years several great actors have passed into the beyond, have been praised, mourned and forgotten. Their departure has created a certain void; it is certain that they have thus far no successors; but inasmuch as, in most instances, they stood for nothing but their own fame, their decease, however deplorable, did not assume the character of a general calamity. But with Sir Henry Irving the case is different. In him existed the essence of the ideal theatrical spirit—the spirit that was charged with a sense of responsibility, with a conviction of the tremendous scope and limitless possibilities of the drama as an agent of intellectual and moral good in the form of entertainment, and an ambition to restore the stage to a dominant position among the arts—and with him that spirit, the spirit of high endeavor, as opposed to the greed of mere commercialism, has, it is to be feared, vanished. It is true, of course, that his life work was nearly done, that he was meditating an early retirement from the stage which he had adorned for nearly fifty years, and that, latterly, failing health and great losses had compelled him sometimes to subordinate the claims of art to need of a competency for his old age, but even when he descended to popular melodrama as a sort of inevitable concession to a debauched public taste and the inexorable demands of sordid, speculative management, he yet contrived to invest these performances with a dignity and a significance which was peculiar to his own productions, and redeemed them from the charge of being altogether trivial and vulgar. There was a fine illustration of this capacity which he had for elevating the scene, when his noble and pathetic figure of Dante imparted some sort of poetic value to the brazen and hollow ingenuities of the later Sardou.

Washington Evening Star.

In considering the death of Henry Irving we may well emphasize in this country the loss of the diplomat and the friend. For to us he was more than actor. Years ago, long before the existence of the general good feeling that now marks the relations between the United States and England, he gave the weight of his popularity and influence to the establishment of a brotherhood of the two peoples. He spoke for it both here and at home, and with an eloquent sincerity. When it was remarked in his presence that England had coaling stations all around the world, while America had none, he replied: "Why not coal together?" an observation which, if it smacked more of poetry than of statesmanship, was yet an index to the warmth of his individual feelings and of his hearty friendship for us as a nation. And this sentiment strengthened with every visit he paid us. He was one of the most earnest champions we had in the whole of the British Empire.

Philadelphia Press.

So far as a close-at-hand view of him goes, no one speaks more by authority than Bram Stoker, his friend and manager. Recently he expressed himself as follows about his famous chief: "If ever an actor was born to the stage Henry Irving was an instance. The stage was then, as it has ever been and is now, his world. Not only did he become a distinguished actor, but he founded a new school of acting. He it was who did away with the stilted styles of the setting forth of character and incident then in vogue, who threw the light of nature into the darkest corners of both tragedy and comedy and in doing so increased the mordant powers of each. Those only who remember the storm of opinions that waged round his characterization of Macbeth and Hamlet can understand to the full the extraordinary change he wrought. He believed that the highest phase of the art of acting was impersonation, and to this end he used all his powers. He went back to fact and history, and followed the author's meaning from his survey of the natural materials whence he drew his characters."

New Haven Register.

Henry Irving stood virtually alone, upon a plane of histrionic excellence from which all other followers of the old, substantial school of acting had disappeared. He had brought his art to well nigh absolute perfection, leaving all others far behind. Gifted by nature with splendid talent and far more than ordinary mental power, he had developed his ability by continuous hard work. He was admired and loved wherever he was known, no less in this country than in his own; he had been knighted; still it may be believed that he found greater satisfaction in the consciousness that he had accomplished the best that men could accomplish in his profession than in the plaudits of the masses and the token of royal appreciation. These he valued only because he knew that he was worthy of them.

Chicago Tribune.

Criticism of Irving has been various, and has been heavily influenced by his mannerisms of voice and gait and general personality, but if admirability and intellect can make an actor great, then Irving must be considered one of the greatest and worthy to be ranked with Garrick, Kemble, Kean and other famous English actors of the past. He was not an emotional actor in any sense, and even in his most melodramatic characters he was not "emotional," never sentimental or gushy. He appealed to the heart through the brain. For more than a quarter of a century he has been England's foremost actor, and whatever opinion Americans may have had of him, certainly no European actor has ever been more cordially welcomed here, not only as actor, but as gentleman and scholar.

Ohio State Journal.

Great as an actor, great as a producer, greater as an artist, and greatest as a man, Sir Henry Irving did for his profession and the people who believe in what no other English-speaking man has ever done. Beyond that, he has furnished a glorious object lesson for all aspiring souls, from the country lad with limited training to the passionate genius who impatiently awaits what he considers his best recognition. When the lord's chief ruler dies they cry, "The King is dead! Long live the King," but when an Irving passes away, they merely say, "He is dead," and life passes and gives back only silence, or those days like the hours of leaving, for a little while, a void that is not filled, a heart pang that is unrequited, and asks itself to abscond in the chambers of memory.

Denver Republican.

Now that Irving has gone from us many will recall the many triumphs and personal nobilities that belonged to his career and life. Applause never turned his head. He was not puffed up. The simple sweetness of his character remained unchanged. The kindliness of his heart was always in evidence. He loved the men and women who had suffered and achieved success with him. In the hour of adulation Irving's heart disturbed the action of his head. If he had consulted only that he would have been low and far between. His virtues were too large to create alarm. The whole English-speaking world will mourn over his sudden death, for he made the world richer than he found it.

Philadelphia Inquirer.

It is not too much to say that with his decease the English-speaking stage has lost its most prominent figure and its chief ornament. The artistic value and the dramatic effectiveness of Irving's work as an actor were to some slight extent impaired by mannerisms which he was either unable or unwilling to eliminate, but his impersonations were distinguished by an originality of conception and a vitality of embodiment which rendered them deeply moving and profoundly impressive, while in certain parts of an eccentric or melodramatic character, such parts as Matthias in The Bells, as Dubosc and Lesurques in The Lyons Mail, as the old king in Louis the Eleventh, and as Digby Grant in The Two Roses, he was absolutely unrivaled.

Boston Transcript.

The peculiar and distinctive gift of Sir Henry Irving was one of the rarest on the stage. Almost alone among the actors of his time, at the beginning and at the end of his career, he had power of intellect. In no other player in his own country, in America or on the Continent was there such clear, penetrating and persuasive force of mind. The newest pupil from the dramatic schools could pick twenty flaws in his technique. The youngest reviewer on the newspapers could confidently affirm that he had not the art of impersonation. His just admirers—and they were also his warmest—were not blind to these shortcomings. They knew that Irving oftener bent his characters to himself than himself to his characters.

Chicago Post.

His was a compelling power, the very strength of his intellect overcame all limitations of personality and presence and beat down every form of opposition that might present itself to any discriminating mind. His greatness lay not merely in a long sway over the public through reason of sumptuous productions, revelations of dramatic ingenuity and splendor and the ordinary effects by which the actor gains applause and popularity, but by the triumph of holding the wisest men, the keenest critics, the most searching students, in intellectual captivity and gaining their appreciation and lasting recognition. The appeal to the emotions is sooner or later forgotten; the conquest of the brain is lasting.

Washington Times.

But this much is clear even now: He was the greatest figure of our stage. He never forgot the actor's first requirement of being a good and true man. He never permitted the craftsman's pleasure in his calling to obscure the larger responsibility of his art—the responsibility to teach all his life the value of character and the beauty of ideals. And so, being a good and true man, an experienced and expert craftsman and a sincere artist, his influence grew with his every appearance on the stage, and it will live in the doctrine of hard working, noble serving and plain living, which his life so fully exemplified, long after the last of us who knew him shall have passed away.

Rochester Union and Advertiser.

As a man Henry Irving was held in as high esteem as he was held as an actor. As an actor he did not always fit his part, but he always played well his part among men. Some of his histrionic creations were grandiose and memorable, never to be forgotten by those who witnessed them, and others were not so satisfying. But in the real world the impression made by Irving was that of a well balanced man, an admirably developed character and a kind-hearted gentleman who pursued in scholarly fashion the beautiful art to which he had devoted his life.

Chicago Inter-Ocean.

And Henry Irving made the actor's profession socially reputable as well as artistically estimable. He showed that social irregularity of any kind was not a necessary incident in the actor's life, not a necessary "eccentricity of genius," and not even indispensable for the acquisition of that notoriety—in the good sense of the world—which the actor must have in order to succeed. He showed that good sense, good taste, well used talents and unflagging industry could bring success to the actor just as they do in other professions.

Indianapolis News.

Back of his personal handicap was the informing mind, the deathless will and a devotion to his art that, having done all, was as one that had done nothing. For these things he became, and rightfully, the foremost influence in the theatre of his time, and for these things he leaves a memory to be honored, not merely in what it had done, but in what it was—that of a man that never knew defeat; that exploited the highest attainment of character, which is the devotion of heart and mind and soul and material possessions, in the pursuit of perfection, along the way in which it found its life work.

London Morning Post.

No stronger personality, no more unflagging activity, has within living memory adorned the English stage. His death is a national loss and his memory a national possession. Had he gone to the bar he would have reached the bench, if into the church he would surely have become a bishop. He chose the stage, and was easily the foremost actor of his time.

Pittsburgh Press.

People did not wait until he was dead to place the laurel of a generous appreciation upon his brow; while living they gladly yielded to him the honor and support due his worth. They loved him for the new ideals of life he had given them. Many people will attribute their enlarged conception of life and its duties to his masterly portrayals of character.

LAST WEEK'S BILLS.

PASTOR'S.—Grace Emmett headed the bill and made the laughing hit of the week with her very amusing sketch, Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband. Miss Emmett is one of the most natural Irish comediennes on the stage, and reminds one of Annie Yeamans at her best. Her brogue is charming, and she makes every point with the care of an artist who is interested in her work. Not one of her lines missed fire, and the audiences were kept laughing and smiling by turns during the entire piece. Leon Fairchild, Ben J. Miles, and Pickering Brown were the assistants who helped Miss Emmett in her task of amusing the faithful patrons of Pastor's. Smirl and Kessner scored in their acrobatic and dancing skit, and their cute little dog made a hit all by himself. J. K. Hutchinson and company repeated the success scored here a few weeks ago in The Idol Smasher, which winds up with a thrilling hand-to-hand fight that is very realistic. Mr. Hutchinson's impersonation of the rough-and-ready Texan is one of the best things he has done, and he was well supported by two fairly clever people. Harry Dudley and Alice Chesiyn pleased with their bright singing act. They introduced a new song called "Good-bye, Sweetheart, Good-bye," by Albert Von Tilzer, that was warmly encored. Miss Chesiyn's coon song was also thoroughly appreciated. Cook and Sylva were a special feature and Mr. Cook again proved that he is among the very best wooden-shoe dancers in the profession. The new trio, Fitzgibbon, Morse and Drisiane, were an added attraction and made a triumphant debut. Mr. Morse presided at the piano and played the accompaniments for the other two. It is needless to say that Bert Fitzgibbon simply walked away with the honors. He has a method that is so original that he need fear no imitators, and the way the audience shrieked at his parodies, sung in his own peculiar way, was a treat. The act went with a swing and dash that was irresistible, and the three young men were given many hearty recalls. Others in the bill were Kane, the ventriloquist; Siddons Brothers, Orville Fitcher, Sheppard and Ward, and Gordon and Chacon. The vitagraph views were interesting. James B. Donovan was billed to appear, assisted by Rena Arnold, in a new sketch called Twenty Minutes on Broadway, written by himself. Owing to Miss Arnold's illness, Mr. Donovan did a monologue that was a big hit.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE.—The Agoust Family, who were seen here some years ago, are paying us a return visit and last week repeated the success they scored here during their former engagements. Their juggling act is unique and shines more brightly by contrast with that of a troupe of imitators that appeared at the same theatre a few weeks ago. The laughing honors were pretty evenly divided between Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne in The New Depot and Will H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols in From Zaza to Uncle Tom. The players and the sketches are among the very best in vaudeville, and the spectators gave themselves up unrestrainedly both to Mr. Cressy's quiet humor and to Mr. Murphy's more boisterous methods. The Village Choir scored heavily with their well rendered songs and were encored repeatedly. Joe Reichen, a European performer, made his American debut, exhibiting a few exceedingly well trained dogs. Nothing exactly like them has ever been seen here. The animals are wonderfully strong in their legs and when tossed in the air land firmly on their master's hand in any position desired by him. The best trick in the act is the one in which one of the dogs stands on Mr. Reichen's forehead on one of his forefeet, maintaining a splendid balance. Ed J. Rice, the clever monologist, who is seen here too seldom, won plenty of laughs with his well told stories. The Flying Rathbuns, Conkley and McBride, Kenyon and De Garmo, Al. Coleman, the Althea Twins, Robin Heath, Kilmer and Daly, and the kinetograph rounded out the bill.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA.—Fred Karno's original London Comedy company of fourteen people made its first appearance in America last week, presenting A Night in an English Music Hall; or, The Mumming Birds. It is a rough-and-tumble farce, full of the most absurd horseplay, but judging from the laughter that prevailed during its interpretation it just hit the fancy of Mr. Hammerstein's patrons. The scene is set to show a small variety stage of the old-fashioned sort, with the lower boxes resting inside the footlights. There are upper and lower boxes filled with spectators, all of whom take a hand in the fun. There is a bibulous man, who has a box all to himself, and a very bad boy is seated in the box opposite. The music hall artists come on one by one to do their turns, and the manner in which the spectators express their disapproval of each and every act is extremely funny. There are a topical vocalist, a serio-comic with very slender legs, a singing quartette, a magician and last, but not least, a wrestler, all of whom make vain attempts to entertain. They are bombarded with buns, bits of bread, cushions, and in one instance even a fresh custard pie is used as a weapon to discourage a too ambitious tenor. In the finale the entire company becomes involved in a row and the curtain falls on an uproarious climax. It is not to be wondered at that Mr. Karno has kept five or six companies busy in different parts of England for several years past with this act. Marshall P. Wilder was on hand with some new material as well as his old standbys. His dissertation on the automobile craze was one of the best things in his act. Alexander Leo Nino, a clever trick violinist, made his American debut with success, as did also Mlle. Celeste, a smart juggler, who was billed as a "juggierine." The Empire City Quartette scored their usual hit, and the Mason-Keeler company in Hooked by Crook never went better. Ed Reynard, with his remarkable ventriloquial act; Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, with their smart dancing turn; Keno, Welsh and Melrose, clever comedy acrobats, and the vitagraph rounded out a fine bill.

ALHAMBRA.—James T. Powers, the comic opera comedian, made his vaudeville debut here last week and was given a reception that proved that he is held in high esteem even in Harlem. Mr. Powers presented a little offering called Dreaming, evidently of his own making. It was billed as a satire on the vaudeville craze and included a number of odd little tricks that helped to show the comedian at his best. He sits down in an easy chair, falls asleep, and during his dreams goes through the various stunts done by vaudeville comedians. He does a short monologue, in which he tells some fairly funny stories, sings a "tough" song, and winds up with a jolly topical ditty, in the rendition of which he is assisted by a chorus of five men. He also introduces his imitation of a girl dressing that he has been doing off and on for many years, but which never grows tiresome. Taken altogether, Mr. Powers' plunge into vaudeville was very happily made. Another big novelty was The Girl in the Clouds, a pretentious production staged by Lewis Hooper under the direction of Lasky Rolfe and company, who are responsible for some of the best novelties we have seen this season. The act opens with a scene showing the tall buildings of New York at night as seen from the roof of a skyscraper. Five men are sitting on the roof, one of whom is a clever 'cellist and the others fairly good singers. The singers twit their musical companion with his infatuation for a girl in the clouds, from whom he says he receives his inspiration. The 'cellist plays and the young men sing the song called "Dearie," and the refrain is echoed from above. A slow transformation discloses a girl seated in the clouds, playing a harp and singing. She expresses a longing to join her earthly admirer, and as the god of thunder appears amid much rumbling and as the scene fades from view it is presumed that the girl gets her wish. The turn is pleasing on account of its novelty, and made a good impression. The incidental music was arranged by Theodore Bendix. The Mysterious Howards, Australian entertainers, who do an act similar to that of the Zancigs, made their American debut. One of them is blindfolded, while his brother walks about the house picking up articles offered, which the man on the stage describes in the usual way, after being questioned. The second part of their act is done without any verbal communication, and the Howard on the stage writes the numbers on bills and the time on watches with unerring accuracy. The turn is an excellent one of its class. Mayme Remington and her Buster Brownies were big favorites, and every one of their songs was warmly applauded. Miss Remington introduced a new Japanese song, with a special setting and costumes, that is quite catchy. Other good acts were done by Sydney Grant, with his new imitations; the Three Yoscarrys, Shean and Warren, Bruno and Russel, Foster and Foster, and the vitagraph.

HURTIG AND SEAMON'S.—The Mysterious Zancigs headed the bill and kept the audience wondering how they managed to do their wonderful tricks of thought transference. Ward and Curran were as funny as they always are in the latest version of The Terrible Judge. Al W. Maddox and Maybelle Melvin presented for the first time here their new sketch, At the Station. The scene is laid in a country railroad station, and the characters are a comedian and a soubrette, who had known each other in more prosperous days, and who meet in this out-of-the-way place by chance. They shake hands and resume their old friendship, agreeing to start together to fill an engagement in Boston that has been promised to the girl for herself and another partner, who had backed out at the last moment. The sketch is simply a skeleton on which are hung a number of good gags and several excellent imitations done by Mr. Maddox, who gives a very lifelike portrayal of the eccentricities of Johnny Ray, besides doing his imitation of a dying rooster and other things. Miss Melvin is a pretty girl; she sings a coon song excellently and assists Mr. Maddox in extracting the humor from the witty lines of the sketch. Mr. Maddox is a very versatile comedian, and is capable of even better work than he does in this act. The team received a double curtain call at the end of the sketch. Edwin Keough, assisted by Helen Nelson, was supremely satisfactory in A Vaudeville Surprise. Dolph and Susie Levino introduced a new skit called Hypnotizing a Wife, that proved very diverting and won a good many laughs. Carlin and Otto, in their familiar Dutch specialty; the Heras Family of clever acrobats; Nanon Jacques, vocalist; Byers and Herrmana, pantomimists, and the kinetograph also found favor.

COLONIAL.—A female jiu jitsu expert named M. Soga was the principal attraction last week. Miss Soga had an encounter in Harlem a few days ago with a loafer who tried to flirt with her, and she applied her knowledge of the Japanese art of self-defense so skillfully and obtained so much newspaper notoriety that Manager Williams lost no time in engaging her for his theatre. She gave an exhibition that interested the women very much, showing how a very slight girl can defend herself against the attacks of the strongest man. Her turn was followed by jiu jitsu bouts between several male Japanese. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew made a laughing hit in The Yellow Dragon, George R. Deane's cleverly written sketch. Edward Blondell and company were immensely funny in The Lost Boy. Frank Bush told a number of good stories in his inimitable way. The Brothers Lloyd, in their marvelous bounding rope act; Ollie Young and Brother, clever hoop rollers; Carmencita, with her Spanish dances; the Musical Avolios, xylophone experts, and Ila Grannon also pleased. Ephraim Thomson's elephants were a special feature and their antics were loudly applauded.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET.—Lillian Russell continued her engagement, and crowded houses were the rule. Miss Russell has dispensed with the services of the orchestra, and her accompaniments are now played on a piano placed on the stage. Edwin Stevens returned to vaudeville and delighted every one with his bright monologue. Searl and Violet Allen were seen in a new sketch called The New Reporter, that is full of bright lines and deserves to rank with The Sign Painter in popularity. Both players were quite at home in their parts and won many hearty laughs. Watson, Hutchings and Edwards scored heavily in The Vaudeville Exchange. Rawson and June threw their boomerangs with great success. Gillett's dogs, Charles F. Semon, Hathaway and Walton, Cooper and Robinson, and the pictures contributed to an excellent programme.

PROCTOR'S FIFTY-EIGHTH STREET.—Herbert Keicey and Effie Shannon were the headliners of an excellent programme, presenting A String of Pearls. Katie Barry was a special feature and made a big hit with her new songs, including a funny ditty called "Ain't It Hard to be So Beautiful?" written by Porter Emerson Browne and George H. Bell. Dolan and Lenharr and Delmore and Lee were also prominent in the bill that included Coin's dogs, Lew Hawkins, Mills and Morris, the Transatlantic Four, Kennedy and Quatrelli, and the pictures.

The Burlesque Houses.

DEWEY.—The World Beaters filled a profitable engagement here last week and pleased the patrons with a bright, lively performance. The excellent olio included McFarland and McDonald, Sisters De Forest, Bohannon and Corey, Quigg, Edwards and Nickerson, and Niblo and Spencer. Jolly Old Sports and All at Sea were the travesties that engaged the services of a large company. This week, Wine, Women and Song.

GOTHAM.—Fred Irwin's Big Show entertained the Harlemites most sucessfully and the various members of the company came in for warm approval. Six Musical Ratzenbenders, Sisters De Faye, and Carleton and Terre are prominent in the olio. This week, The Devil's Daughter.

CIRCLE.—The Dainty Duchess, under the direction of Weber and Rush, scored heavily with the patrons of this house last week. This week, Clark's Runaway Girls.

LONDON.—Miss New York, Jr. proved a strong magnet and the efforts of the Wiora Trio, Boston City Quartette, Holman, Hayward and Hayward and others were well received. This week, Empire Burlesquers.

MINER'S BOWERY.—The Bohemian Burlesquers played a return engagement here last week to good business. This week, Yankee Doodle Girls.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE.—Reilly and Woods' Big Show drew big audiences last week. This week, Miss New York, Jr.

MARSHALL IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, GERMANY, Oct. 12.

Just a few lines from Berlin, the centre of European vaudeville enterprise. It is so called because all the Continental managers either come personally or send a representative once a month to this metropolis to view the acts at the different establishments. Strange to say, however, out of the numerous variety halls in the city only three can be picked as strictly first-class. These are the Apollo Theatre, Wintergarten, and Passage Theatre. These theatres generally have a splendid pick of the vaudeville world for their monthly programmes. The Wintergarten programme of this month contains several American acts, all being well received. Collins and Hart are quite successful in producing the desired laughter, while the comic wire act of Cole de Lasse Duo and the bar act of the Artois Brothers are watched with the greatest interest. Ludwig Amann, the mimic, also gets his share of well-earned applause. At the Apollo Theatre Daisy Jerome is featured, and she caught on immensely with the Germans. There is also a farce called An Evening in an American Tingel Tangel that has been the laughing hit of the theatre since June. This is a German copy of the original production, there being at least twenty imitations playing at the different Continental halls. The feature at the Passage Theatre this month is your humble servant, Marshall, the Mystic, and his hats, and I must say that the hats are behaving admirably. When an opposition house offers an artist time for next season, as they did to Marshall, it must mean something, as that is by no means customary in this country.

Besides the different theatres there are two permanent circuses in the city. Circus Busch is at Hamburg during the Summer, but during the regular season Berlin is the headquarters. A number of first-class vaudeville turns are shown there between the regular circus acts, but as I have not had the pleasure of seeing the performance I cannot say anything about it. One of the announced acts is called Japanese Infantry; or, The Heroes of Port Arthur. I understand it is similar to the act offered by the Streator Zouaves, except that its members are Japanese. The manager of the turn is an American. Circus Albert Schumann is the other one, both being first-class places, and they try to outdo each other with sensational novelties. Speaking of novelties, Richard Pitrot was in town for a number of days, during which time he was busy looking over the different bills, with the object of finding something in this entertainment world which is brand new for the States. Some people may consider that an easy task for Mr. Pitrot, but, on the contrary, it is very difficult for several reasons. Firstly, over here they generally get monthly engagements, while in the States it is only a week. Secondly, they cannot understand that "two shows a day" system, being used to night shows only. Then the most important fact is that the American public is so different from the European that an act may be a big hit here and a fall in Yankeeland. All this is given full consideration by the "globe trotter." He expects to return home about January, and by that time I am sure he will have enough novelties on his books to supply all the first-class houses at home.

As I left Copenhagen I met Everhart, the hoop roller, who is this month at the Circus Variety. McDonald and Huntington are also on the bill. I received a communication from Amsterdam, Holland, about the bill at the Circus Carre, where a number of Americans are performing at present. The Four Bard Brothers, acrobats, made their first European appearance there Oct. 1 and were successful. They have a very good start over here, as next month they come to Berlin; for December they have booked Copenhagen. Alice Raymond and John Kurkamp in their pleasing musical act and Charles Montrell with his original juggling turn are also successful. Potter and Hartwell have a late place on the bill, following several acrobatic acts; nevertheless they make a hit. They had a very unpleasant experience, however, on their trip to Amsterdam. At Copenhagen they bought two sleepers for the German train. When they arrived at Altona, ready to occupy their berths, the tickets were ignored. Not having any German money, and the official not accepting any Dutch or Danish coin, they were obliged to sit up all night in a small, cold apartment. From Amsterdam they go to Paris. Imro Fox and the Baggesens are at the Apollo, Vienna.

The Coliseum at Munich reopened Sept. 30. It was completely renovated during the Summer. It can now be considered a first-class metropolitan variety house. It is under the direction of Joseph Brunner, who is also proprietor of "Die Blumensaele," another first-class theatre in that city. The Apollo Theatre at Nuernberg opened Oct. 16 with the return of the once-popular resident manager, Otto Hiller, who held that position from 1897 to 1902. The Scala Theatre of Cologne and the Reichshallen Theatre of Duesseldorf have formed a company to go into effect Nov. 1. It is called "Folies-Caprice-Gesellschaft," by its founders, Leo L., Lewin, late of Rembrandt Theatre, Amsterdam, and J. Schubert, late house agent of Folies Caprice Theatre, Berlin. The financial basis of the company has not been announced as far. It has been announced that the Moulin Rouge Theatre, Paris, will soon have the same director, M. Vallette, under whose management the theatre was recently closed by the striking artists, as their salary did not materialize. With this it is reported that he will make good all loss of salaries, etc. However, I am convinced that the performers will not be so quick in signing contracts for that house in the future unless there is a visible guarantee for their money.

There is a book in the hands of the printer called "Artistenrecht," which, I understand, is a full treatise of the rights of performers and their duties. It will undoubtedly prove a most useful thing in the hands of any artist traveling on the Continent on account of the numerous clauses and tricks in the contracts.

MARSHALL, THE MYSTIC.

NEW SPECTACLE AT THE HIPPODROME.

The Romance of a Hindoo Princess, a gorgeous spectacle in two scenes, replaced The Raiders as the second half of the bill at the New York Hippodrome, on Wednesday evening last. Every one of the five thousand seats in the big house was filled, and the immense audience expressed its approval of the new offering in no uncertain way. The spectacle was arranged by Frederick Thompson, of Thompson and Dundy, managers of the Hippodrome, and to Mr. Thompson's credit it must be said that he has excelled his own record, which is one that any man might be proud of. The two big scenes, splendidly painted by Arthur Voegtlin, are strikingly beautiful, and showed to great advantage on the immense stage. The groupings, the movements of the hundreds of people, the quaint and pretty costumes, and the apparent disregard of cost in staging the piece, all helped to impress the spectators in an irresistible manner. To Edward F. Temple, the masterly stage director of the Hippodrome, is due the credit for the result attained. In this piece he has again shown himself a positive genius in the matter of handling big crowds, and the few hitches that occurred were of so trivial a nature that they did not mar the effect perceptibly. There was an annoying delay between the scenes, owing to a break in the machinery used for lowering the floor over the big tank, but the audience was very patient and felt amply rewarded when the scene was finally disclosed.

The story of the piece in brief concerns a young Hindoo princess whose hand is sought in marriage by rival lovers. Her father gives her to one man, and the disappointed one, for revenge, plans an attack on the castle in which the Princess lives, with the intention of abducting her. With a number of horsemen and several elephants he surrounds the castle and there is a terrific encounter, at the climax of which he rides up on the back of an elephant under the window of the Princess' room and carries her off. The second scene shows a mountain pass, with the poor Princess in the hands of her abductors. Her affianced husband, followed by an immense army of retainers, makes an attack on the camp and after another exchange of hostilities the girl is rescued and carried back in triumph. The villain and his followers are put to rout, and they are so hard pressed that several of the elephants and their riders are forced to make a slide for life from the top of a hill into the river below. This episode was the climax of the spectacle, and New York got a new sensation as it saw the ponderous animals slide down the runway and land in the big tank with a series of splashes that caused the water to fly in every direction. The pachyderms seemed to enjoy their plunge immensely, and appeared to be most unwilling to leave the tank. They were secured by the raising of the floor of the stage to its proper level, and this kept the majority of the audience interested for several minutes after the curtain had fallen. In the first scene there is a ballet of Nautch girls that is beautifully costumed and a treat to the artistic eye. The whole affair was a triumph for Mr. Thompson and Mr. Temple, and will undoubtedly result in keeping up the interest of the public in this, the largest and finest playhouse in the world.

A Yankee Circus on Mars was retained as the opening number, and the brilliant pageant was again received with great applause. Some new European acts were added to the olio, that makes the attraction even stronger than before. The act that found most favor was that presented by Miss Marquis, who has a troupe of trained ponies that are a delight. One of them is a born comedian, and, assisted by a clown, made a hit that will surely cause an extension of his engagement. Another big act was shown by Claire Heliot, who has a lion-taming exhibition that is one of the biggest things of its kind ever shown here. An immense cage was erected by the expert stage hands, and a dozen lions were released from their cages into it. Miss Heliot put them through their paces in splendid style, showing an utter absence of fear in the presence of the kings of the forest. The remarkable feature of the act is that Miss Heliot has in the same cage several large dogs, and she compels the lions to stand still on the platform while the dogs take flying leaps over their backs. At the end of the act, after all the lions but one have been driven back to their cages, Miss Heliot carries the remaining one off on her shoulders. Some amusement was caused by the antics of her attendant, who displayed remarkable agility in placing the necessary paraphernalia, and making a quick exit from the cage. The Kaufmann Troupe of women cyclists, Louise and Robert Cottrell, N. Marceiline, the Four Milans, the Three Carrollos, the Three Castrillions, and the clowns continue their successful engagements.

On the opening night, Florence Sinnott, who played the Princess, had a very narrow escape from a sudden and terrible death. In the rescue scene, in which she is carried up the mountain on the back of a spirited horse by her lover, she slipped from the horse's back and fell in the track of the other horses that were galloping up the hill. She was promptly rescued, however, and sustained only a few bruises. Most of the people in the house were watching the plunging elephants, and Miss Sinnott's mishap did not cause any undue excitement. The Romance of A Hindoo Princess and A Yankee Circus on Mars will continue at the Hippodrome until further notice.

MASON A BUSY MAN.

Jack Mason has been exceptionally busy this season, as his services as an arranger and producer of dances have been in great demand. He has staged the principal numbers in The Belle of Avenue A, The Jolly Baron, the Duke of Duluth and George Sidney's company. Last week, during the temporary illness of Nat M. Wills he played Mr. Wills' part in The Duke of Duluth at three performances without a rehearsal. His Five Society Belles have opened their season and are well booked. The act is entirely new in every detail, and Mr. Mason has exercised unusual care in selecting the members of his little company. He has been offered a fine list of bookings in Europe for this act and will organize an equally good company, keeping one at work in Europe and the other on this side. He also has in preparation a condensed musical comedy which he will send out, headed by Harry Short, the comedian, and Grace Garner, who is at present prima donna of the Society Belles.

THE PAN CLUB.

The Pan Club, the members of which believe that a good natured "roast" is a good thing for everybody, and which is composed of the male members of the Tiger Lillies company, including the proprietor, Will N. Drew, and Manager Grodz, held its first social session at Duluth, Minn., Oct. 12. An excellent menu was served, after which each member was "put on the pan" and done to a turn. Those present were Mrs. Craig, Mrs. Grodz, Mrs. Burmaster, Mrs. Carr, the Misses Sherwood, Vernon, Schuler and Marks, and Messrs. Will N. Drew, Most Honorable Pan; Will J. Cooke, Big Pan; Alex. Carr, Nearly Pan; Sam Laveen, Dish Pan; Al Marshall, Frying Pan; Richy Craig, Little Pan; George Keller, Almost Pan; Will Cunningham, Dancing Pan; Fred Burmaster, Married Pan, and Izzy Grodz, Griddle Pan.

UNCLE SAM'S MOVING PICTURES.

The Navy Department will bring the big moving picture exhibit that has been at the Portland Exposition to St. Louis, where several exhibitions will be given with a view to ascertaining whether a tour of the country with the pictures would be profitable. The views show every department of the navy, and were taken at great expense in America and Europe. The object in showing them throughout the country is to interest young men in joining the navy, as it is calculated that the pictures will stir the blood of the lads in the rural districts so strongly that they simply cannot resist the temptation to rush to the nearest recruiting station to find out what a "life on the ocean wave" is really like.

MELVILLE'S CONTINENTAL NOTES.

HANOVER, GERMANY, Sept. 2.

We arrived here and found a very pretty town and a well-conducted theatre to play in. The Mellini Theatre has been decorated and renovated for the season, and ranks as one of the finest theatres in Germany. The season opened in August, and many agents and directors were present during the first fifteen days. B. F. Keith's foreign representative, Mr. Feiber, among the rest, took a look in, as he is on his Continental tour at present. On the bill were the Harmony Four, well known in America, who made a big success here and are now at the Apollo Theatre, Dusseldorf, where they have been prolonged another two weeks on account of their hit. While here at Mellini Theatre, a little unpleasantness occurred between them and the management. It is the first time I have ever heard of such an incident, but there are many things to learn in Germany. On the contract of the Harmony Four was a stipulation that a box chamber scene was to be provided with drawing-room furniture, and a few other things used in the act. They were accordingly provided, and at the conclusion of the engagement a bill was sent to them for the scenery and all the furniture. I understand that the management do not provide box chamber sets in variety houses, and as this was a special order, sent and got it. The Harmony Four refused to settle, and the case will be tested. The same box scene is being used this week by Tom Hearn, "the lazy juggler," who is on the bill with us. He is waiting to see if he will be charged for the use of it also. By the way, the above gentleman has just received word that he has won his long pending case against Director Brucke, of the Orpheum, Frankfort, who, when he found Hearn was not a howling success at Frankfort changed him on the bill after 8 P. M., putting him on second, when he was ninth on the bill a short time before. Hearn had been to the theatre, read the programme of 7 P. M., satisfied himself that he was on at the same time as the night before, and when he returned to the theatre to go on, discovered that his turn was past and his engagement lost. It was a neat trick, and since it happened every American performer has been quite on the alert for such things. Brucke, the director, has had to pay the full salary to Hearn and all costs of the suit, which was fought by the Artisten Lodge of Berlin, not costing the artist one cent, even if he had lost.

In regard to the accident that happened to myself in the Reichshallen Theatre, Cologne, (same director), where, through the carelessness of a stage-hand, a heavy iron weight fell on my head, I was presented with the doctor's bill, which I paid, although the theatre was responsible. It has been said that I am lucky, as I was not charged for making a dent in the bottom of the weight with my head. While on the subject of law, it may be interesting to the originators of the Magic Kettle act in America to learn that Dr. Maxim Boyd, an alleged scientist, who was employed by a theatrical agent in London to copy the act for the London Hippodrome, has been sentenced to three years in prison, at hard labor, for forgery and a succession of frauds on landladies and others too numerous to mention; his last offense was forging a cheque for £100. He was employed as a clerk in a theatrical agent's office in London, at a salary of twenty-five shillings per week, when he was induced by them to call himself Dr. Maxim Boyd. The agents then booked the act at the London Hippodrome, to oppose the original Magic Kettle at the Palace Theatre.

A colored team of dancers, called the Britons, who are from America, are on the bill here, making a big hit. They opened at Budapest, Hungary, about four months ago, and are on their way to London to open Oct 1. They will certainly get them going there, as their act is ginger from start to finish. On the bill with us are no less than fourteen English-speaking people, the largest number I have met since I came to the Continent, on one bill. We are all having a lot to say to each other. Otto Reuter is one of the big features on the bill; he is acknowledged to be the biggest drawing card in Germany. He is a monologist, and after his act, just by coming out and walking from one side of the stage to the other, gets no less than eight curtains nightly. I am glad we go on just before him, as the audience is tired out with applauding after his turn.

I have commenced to play theatres on percentage. This is my first trial at this form of work with "Motogirl" in Germany. There are many cities with populations ranging from 60,000 and above, that have directors of theatres who, although willing to take a chance, will not bind themselves down to a large salary, but will give, if the act is a strong drawing card, a good guarantee of actual cash, and sharing terms, or percentage on the gross receipts paid nightly and allow a representative to control the box office receipts. All these arrangements can be made for an act that will draw. From Oct. 1 to 15 we are playing on these conditions in Crefeld, four hours' railroad ride from Hanover, then finish the month of October at Central Theatre, Chemnitz. There is a big field for acts that do not demand extravagant salaries, and such acts can play at least two years without interruption, and only have to work once every evening. I shall feel quite strange having to appear twice daily, if we are ever called upon to do it after getting through with the Continent. I may mention that the four Harveys on the bill with us here do a very clever wire act, in which they finish with a novel cake walk on the wire, executing many of the well-known evolutions. They hold contracts for America, opening at Keith's Union Square Theatre. The new programme for the first part of October at the Mellini Theatre includes Bedini and Arthur, the comic jugglers. The business here has been of a record type, with standing room at a premium. I will write again from Chemnitz, when we get there, and I hope to send some interesting news. I understand it is one of the prettiest theatres in Germany. I suppose the audience will be supplied, as usual, with beer and sandwiches, to keep them interested.

FANNEMIC MELVILLE.

HOUDINI FOOLS POLICE.

Harry Houdini, who is filling a two weeks' engagement at the Orpheum, Brooklyn, played a neat trick on the police of the Bergen street station on Tuesday last by escaping from a cell after he had been securely locked in. In addition to Captain Baldwin and several of his subordinates there were a number of reporters present, and they all joined in helping to search the "Handcuff King" after he had divested himself of his clothing. They looked into his mouth, ran their fingers through his hair and apparently made sure that he had no keys concealed about him. He was then placed in a cell which was locked with a bar lock and then fastened with two large padlocks. In less than seven minutes Houdini not only released himself, but opened the door of the adjoining cell and let out a man who was sleeping off a spree. The captain and his men were greatly astonished, and the former gave Houdini a letter certifying to the facts, which the performer has added to the large number of similar certificates that he has received from the police officials of the leading cities of Europe.

CLEVER ARTISTS RETURN.

Nick Long and Idalene Cotton, who have been out of vaudeville for some time, have returned to that field and have been very warmly welcomed. Their press notices have been extremely flattering, and Miss Cotton's imitation of Mrs. Fiske in Leah Kleschna has been very highly praised.

VAUDEVILLE IN BROOKLYN.

At the Orpheum last week the bill included Harry Houdini, Emmett Corrigan and company in his new act, John Hyams and Leila McIntyre, Charles H. Burke, Grace La Rue and company, Macart's dogs and monkeys, George Wilson, and Toto. This week Ephraim Thompson's elephants, Houdini, Carmencita, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Edward Blondell and company, Frank Bush, Musical Avollos, Brothers Lloyd, and Ella Granson.

At Hyde and Behman's last week Knabenshue was the leading feature, others being Frank D. Bryan, Press Eldridge, Goleman's dogs and cats, Alf Holt, Canfield and Carlton, Doherty Sisters, Piccolo Midgets, and Brandow and Wiley. This week James J. Corbett, Barney Fagan and Henrietta Byron, Howard and Bland, Dan Sherman and Mabel Deforest, Burke and Dempsey, Therese Dorgeval, Wills and Hassan, Ivan Harrington, and Cook and Sylvia.

The Amphion last week offered John T. Kelly and company, Elinore Sisters, Rice and Cady, Tony Wilson and Heloise, Juggling McBans, Josephine Gassman, Mlle. Amoros, and Lee Mas Anders. This week Herbert Keiger and Effie Shannon, Shean and Warren, Adolph Zink, Josephine Gassman and Picks, Kennedy and Rooney, Alf Grant, Martin Brothers, and Robinson and Grant.

Keeney's Theatre last week headlined Valerie Bergere and company, others being Annie and Jennie Yeamans, Frank B. Read and Marion Nelson, Golden Gate Quintette, and Dorsch and Russell. This week George Harris Donohue (Raffles), Frank Mayne and company, Adele Purvis Ouri, Dixon, Bowers and Dixon, Murphy and Andrews, Joe and Hallie Doner, Tauda, and Slater and Williams.

At the Gotham last week were Alice Davenport and company, Edgar Allen and company, Caprice, Lynn and Bay, Beanah and Miller, Nate Leipsig, and Waldorf and Mendez. This week the bill includes O'Brien and Havel, Treloar, Colby and Way, Mayme Remington, Baker and Lynn, Mallery Brothers and Halliday, Watson and Morrisey, and Clifford and Fox.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

The Hebrew Orphan Home Band, composed of sixty clever little musicians in regimental uniforms, saw the performance at Hurtig and Seamon's Music Hall last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance produced their new dramatic sketch, Just Like a Woman, written for them by Edwin T. Emery, at the Empire Theatre, San Francisco, Oct. 1, and both play and players are reported to have made a hit.

Henry Lee will play an indefinite engagement at the Eden Musee, in this city, beginning this week. He will change his impersonations frequently and will have on his list the men who are most in the public eye. During the political campaign he will impersonate the candidates for the principal offices and will use appropriate speeches for each one.

On Thursday evening last the Hippodrome was the scene of an unusually large theatre party. It was composed of the delegates to the Bottle Manufacturers' Association and numbered over 1700.

Pearl Andrews tried a new act at Keith's Union Square Theatre on Tuesday afternoon last and it met with decided approval. The special feature of the turn is a very accurate imitation of Jefferson De Angelis as he appears in Fantana.

Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar returned to vaudeville at the Bijou Theatre, New Haven, Conn., last week, and are reported to have scored a big hit in Mr. Hart's latest farcette, The Other Fellow.

During the engagement of Herrmann the Great at Proctor's Theatre, Troy, N. Y., last week the house was sold out at each performance and standing room was at a premium. According to reports the new act of Herrmann this year is the best he has ever had. The setting is described as gorgeous and cost something like $10,000. Besides Madame Marie Herrmann, the magician is assisted by four valets in page costumes. Herrmann is at Hammerstein's, New York, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lockwood are at their home in Fair Haven, N. J., after a pleasant and prosperous season in the parks. Their act, Her Anniversary Present, gave great satisfaction. They are well booked up for the Winter, with a trip to the Pacific coast.

Norbert Lusk, a young actor-author, is preparing a sketch for Irene Ackerman, who will present it in vaudeville.

Cheridah Simpson has left vaudeville temporarily and has already made a marked impression as Robin Hood in Babes in the Wood.

Annie Irish has engaged Seymour A. Rose and Joseph Egerton for her new one-act play, Jim and Ma, which will be seen at the Colonial next week.

Antonio Pubillones, proprietor of a circus that has been performing in Cuba and Central and South America, was detained on an order of arrest on Saturday as he was about to sail for Havana. William Hawkins recovered judgment for $1,068.67 as the assignee of Alfred N. Gillette, an acrobat with the circus in February, March and April, 1902. It is alleged in the complaint that Gillette took part of his salary in notes and lent the circus man money.

Mudge and Morton sailed Oct. 21 on the Philadelphia for Southampton and go from there to South Africa, playing Johannesburg and Cape Town and returning to London for four weeks at the Palace.

RETURN TO VAUDEVILLE

NICK LONG AND IDALENE COTTON

A Pronounced Success!

IN THEIR OWN ORIGINAL COMEDIETTA, "MANAGERIAL TROUBLES."

Baltimore American and Commercial Advertiser.

MARYLAND THEATRE

Nick Long and Idalene Cotton Heartily Received—Entire Bill Good.

One of the best sketches given for some time on the vaudeville stage was presented yesterday at the Maryland Theatre, when Nick Long and Idalene Cotton gave a little one-act piece entitled "Managerial Troubles." The actors were more than ordinarily skillful in their line and Miss Cotton proved herself the possessor of great versatility. One of the cleverest features of her work was an imitation of Mrs. Fiske in "Leah Kleschna," which was a little gem of art in itself. Any one who has seen Mrs. Fiske recognized the tones and the mannerisms of that actress in the imitation which Miss Cotton gave. Contrasting vividly with this was her impersonation of the Parisian grisette, a dashing, vivacious creature, who danced and sang French songs even as though she were a bona-fide French woman. The sketch concluded with an Italian scene with Mr. Long, which was heartily enjoyed and most enthusiastically applauded.

The Baltimore Evening Herald.

At the Maryland.

There is certainly much in a name when it appears on a vaudeville programme, no matter what the fair Juliet thought, and when there happens to be two of them and they spell Idalene Cotton and Nick Long steady patrons who know are ready to sit up and take special interest. Before they had uttered a word yesterday at the Maryland matinee these talented imitators had received a round of applause because nobody had ever heard of their being other than clever, and were ready to accept them on faith and past reputation.

Of course the feature was Miss Cotton's almost uncanny imitation of Mrs. Fiske as Leah Kleschna (by permission of Mr. Harrison Grey Fiske), in which her voice and mannerisms are so weirdly like those of the "repression" actress as to give one a queer, uneasy feeling that perhaps there might be something in the ability of one person to drain another's personality. In marked contrast was her daintily fetching song and Yvette Grissette—naturally from Paris, so the programme need not have been at pains to announce the fact—her ragged vari-colored Maria Risotto, from the Italian quarter, and Lia, the stage help with histrionic aspirations. Nor must the pathetic recitation of Nick Long be ignored. It is true that he is of Italian descent and that he has been doing this sort of work for some years, but there is a hint of feeling and human sympathy in the way he does it that brings tears to even some masculine eyes.

The Syracuse Herald.

Keith's Vaudeville.

Keith's vaudeville programme offered at the Grand this week is the best yet presented at that theatre. The headline feature is Idalene Cotton and Nick Long, who present their new, original comedietta, entitled "Managerial Troubles." During the unfolding of the playlet Miss Cotton gives an imitation of Mrs. Fiske as "Leah Kleschna." The imitation was exceedingly effective and, aside from its imitative feature, was of itself a realistic and artistic rendering of the most powerful scene in Mrs. Fiske's powerful play. Miss Cotton's impersonation denotes her possession of sterling abilities as an emotional actress and demonstrates that she is capable of doing much better dramatic work than has yet fallen to her lot. Miss Cotton's imitation of a French music hall singer was chic, artistic and effective. Her personation was exceedingly realistic and elicited much applause. Mr. Long's Italian dialect story was full of pathos and feeling, and the presentation of the original creation entitled "The Dagos" showed Miss Cotton's versatility and her clever character work. Mr. Long was particularly good in this act and both artists were deservedly applauded.

The Toronto News.

Nick Long and Idalene Cotton in "Managerial Troubles" have a vehicle well built to display their versatility. Miss Cotton's imitation of Mrs. Fiske in one of the most stirring scenes from "Leah Kleschna" was something more than mere mimicry; there was acting in it as well, and good acting, too. Miss Cotton appeared also as a French chanteuse, one of her songs being an amusing translation into French verse of her own song, "Alexander." Mr. Long as the stage manager was excellent and his Italian impersonation was thoroughly smooth and entirely convincing.

Miss Cotton's vivid impersonation of Mrs. Fiske as "Leah Kleschna" is pronounced by press and public to be the most artistic ever given of the famous actress.

EDMUND DAY

"In a 20-minute skit of Arizona life entitled 'The Sheriff,' Mr. Day has realized more Arizona than did Augustus Thomas in a long play of that name—and I am reckoning Mr. Thomas as one of the few truly American dramatists. If Day doesn't wax too fat, Vaudeville will yet have its Kipling."—ASHTON STEVENS, San Francisco Examiner.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

The Three Keatons were at Keith's, Boston, last week, following fourteen acts, including Salerno, Clay Clement, Orpheum Comedy Four, Three Seldons, Lee Harrison, Staley and Birbeck, Lavine Cimeron Trio, the Darrows, Corbley and Burke, Murray and Lane, the Valdings, McGlone and Smith, and John Eberly, but the entire audience remained to give "Buster" and his parents their full share of approval.

Ashley Miller and Ethel Browning, with the assistance of Carl Fey, tried out a new one-act play for vaudeville at North Adams, Mass., last week, and the reports indicate that Mr. Miller has written something out of the usual order and a sketch that will prove a winner. The episode is entitled Caught and tells the story of a burglar whose first "job" is spoiled because he has entered a house in which his former sweetheart is the housemaid. He is caught by her, and before matters are adjusted between them they are both caught by the "burglar's" brother, a policeman. The situations, which follow each other rapidly, provide for considerable emotional work, the tenseness of which is relieved by touches of human nature which make plenty of comedy. Caught will be seen at one of the New York theatres during the month.

The engagement is announced of Phenie Kauffman, the prettiest member of the Kauffman troupe of women cyclists now playing at the Hippodrome, to Charles Ford, assistant property master of the big playhouse.

It is reported that Christopher Mathewson will appear in vaudeville in the near future in a sketch that will allow him to show some of his skill as a ball player.

Claire Miller of the Five Columbians had a narrow escape from serious injury at Poli's Theatre, Worcester, Mass., one day last week. She stood too near the cage containing Haveman's animals and one of the lions left the mark of his claws on her shoulder.

Marie Herrmann, on her way to Scranton, Pa., lost a hand satchel on the ferryboat containing money and $1,500 worth of jewelry. Mrs. Herrmann has not as yet recovered any of the lost articles.

The Fitzgibbon-McCoy Trio will begin their regular season this week and have a splendid season's bookings ahead. Max Ritter, the clever singing and dancing comedian, will replace Bert Fitzgibbon in the role of the mischievous brother.

Estelle D'Arville writes THE MIRROR to the effect that she is playing in vaudeville with Ned Nye and is doing her single dancing specialty. Her sister Babette has retired from the stage, having made her final appearance in the Nye-D'Arville act at Utica, N. Y., week of Sept. 25.

Fields and Woolley closed with A Jolly Baron Sept. 30 and opened in vaudeville the following week at the Gotham Theatre, Brooklyn. They are well booked up in their new act, A Trip in an Airship, with which they have been very successful.

Josephine Sabel made such a success at Ronacher's, Vienna, that she was re-engaged for an extra month, making a run of eight weeks at the same house. She opens Nov. 6 at the Tivoli and Oxford, London, for four weeks.

Mademoiselle Lippman has just returned from Paris, where she has been studying. She will be seen in vaudeville this Winter.

William C. Knight of Knight Brothers and Sawtelle, the well-known vaudeville entertainers, was married in Chicago Oct. 14 to Clara G. Meyers. The couple are at home to their friends at 435 Belden Avenue, Chicago.

May and Flora Hengler made an exceptionally brilliant success last week as the headliners of the bill at the Columbia Theatre, Cincinnati. Every one of the local papers spoke in the most enthusiastic terms of their daintiness and grace and gave them high praise for their dancing.

Will Marion Cook and several colored performers sailed for Europe on Friday last on the Philadelphia. Mrs. Abbie Mitchell Cook missed the steamer and had to sail on the Zeeland. Several members of the co. were served with subpoenas in an injunction suit brought by Ernest Hogan, who wished to restrain Mrs. Cook from leaving his organization. The colored folks were so elated at the prospect of going to Europe that they tore up the legal documents and danced on them.

Frank D. Bryan made a big hit last week at Hyde and Behman's, Brooklyn, by reciting a poem in praise of the efforts being made by the Brooklyn school children to have "Old Ironsides" removed from the Charlestown Navy Yard to Prospect Park.

"'Old Hoss' Hoey's style of comedy work lives in James Francis Sullivan, who is one of the stars of 'Me, Him and I' at the Teck this week. Sullivan plays a tramp part and in the last act of the play he is palmed off on a yachting party as an English lord—and then he is 'Old Hoss' Hoey at his best. Sullivan and his fun-making partners are real comedians and they know how to bring out the laughs."—Buffalo Enquirer, Oct. 11, '05.

At this monthly reception also, the following resolutions, offered by the Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, B.D., and seconded by Edyth Totten, were unanimously adopted by a rising vote

Whereas, The New York Chapter of the Actors' Church Alliance, meeting for their first monthly reception of the season in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Communion, New York, has learned the news of the sudden death of Sir Henry Irving; therefore be it

Resolved, That the New York Chapter desires to express deep and heartfelt sorrow at the death of the late Sir Henry Irving, a member and honorary vice-president of the Actors' Church Alliance. We recognize in him the first dramatist and tragedian of his day, whose whole life was devoted to uplifting the stage to the highest level, and calling attention to its power and office as one of the greatest forces for the elevation and education of the people. His loss is felt as that of a personal friend by every member of the Actors' Church Alliance and they desire to unite their tears with those of their fellow players and friends at the funeral to-morrow in Westminster Abbey and say to him: "Farewell, dear brother, good and faithful servant!"

Resolved, That the board of directors of the New York Chapter be respectfully requested to have these resolutions spread upon their minutes, and that Mr. Charles T. Catlin, president of the New York Chapter, be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to Sir Charles Wyndham, president of the Theatrical Managers' Association of Great Britain.

At a recent meeting of the Providence Chapter Al. Roberts, of the Imperial Stock Company, was elected first vice-president of that chapter.

Th next meeting of the Chapter Board of Directors will be November 1 and that of the National Council Friday, November 3. A conference meeting of the New York chapter is appointed for Thursday evening, Nov. 9, at the parish house of St. Chrysostom's Chapel.

The next monthly reception of the New York chapter will be on Thursday, Nov. 23, hour and place to be announced hereafter.

The Pillsbury-Dana Publishing Company is now known as the C. C. Pillsbury Company, Mr. Dana having retired from the firm. Mr. Pillsbury is in active charge, and reports that business is booming. The Pillsbury Company is now located in the Century Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

"In the Valley of Yesterday," published by the Continental Music Company, still continues to grow. No better proof is needed than the large increase of copies sold from week to week.

Every song in the Walter Jacobs catalogue seems to be winning popularity according to the reports of the many singers who are using these numbers with success.

Felix Feist's clever song, "Can't You See I'm Lonely," is forging to the front in a rapid manner. The army of singers now using this song all make the same report: "It's a sure fire winner."

Gertie De Milt has a novel way of rendering "Keep a Little Cozy Corner in Your Heart for Me" that has won much praise.

Clarice Vance, whose clever rendition of coon songs has made her famous, has introduced the new novelty coon song "Sympathy," by Kendis and Paley, and published by Jerome H. Remick & Co. This song, while only in its third week, is already a popular hit.

Mary Marble, starring in Nancy Brown, is using "Fishing" and "Any Old Tree." These numbers look like the comedy songs of the year.

Waller and Magill are featuring with success Drislane and Morse's "Keep a Little Cozy Corner in Your Heart for Me."

Elizabeth Murray, the well known top liner in vaudeville, states that she is delighted with the new coon song "Sympathy," which she recently introduced, and that she responded to so many encores she was compelled to bow her acknowledgments several times before the audience was satisfied to let her go.

Stanley and Brockman appreciate a good ballad and do not hesitate to state that "In Dear Old Georgia" is as popular as "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," which they used from the day it was sent to them by Mose Gumble, general manager of the professional department for Jerome H. Remick & Co.

James Aldrich Libbey's latest composition, "You'll Want Some One to Love You When You're Old," is rapidly gaining friends, being sung by many well-known artists.

Katie Barry is singing a new song by Porter Emerson Browne and George Bell, entitled "Ain't It Hard to Be So Beautiful?" published by the F. B. Haviland Publishing Company.

Jeannette Lowrie, who is doing a specialty in conjunction with Thomas Q. Seabrooke at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre, will sing for the first time in vaudeville a song entitled "Cause I Like You," by Edward James Howe.

Marie Brackman is meeting with success singing "Would You Care?" Miss Brackman states that she doesn't know what she would do were it not for a good song like this, notwithstanding the fact that she has a voice far above the ordinary, but she appreciates a good song by Charles K. Harris.

Dorothy Kenton, the girl with the banjo, has just returned from abroad, where she appeared at the leading theatres and music halls. She was compelled to return to fill engagements made here prior to her sailing for Europe last year. It was this manipulator of melodies on the banjo who introduced Abe Holzman's "Yankee Grit" march in Europe, where it is now being played by some of the most prominent bands and orchestras. Miss Kenton begins her tour on the Proctor circuit next week, "Yankee Grit" being the feature of her act.

In the Duke of Duluth a new song has been introduced by Margaret Witt entitled "I Like Your Way," by J. J. Walker and Max Witt.

Holcombe, Curtis and Webb claim to be getting more encores out of "Zel Zel," "Egypt" and "Lu Lu San" than any other songs they have ever used.

The Brothers and Sisters Ford report success with "In Timbuctoo" and "Keep a Little Cozy Corner in Your Heart for Me," published by the F. B. Haviland Publishing Company.

The Spook Minstrels, now appearing on the Orpheum circuit, have found that Williams and

VOL. II. NEW YORK, OCT. 28, 1905. NO. 26

MR. AND MRS. MARK MURPHY, now featuring Frank D. Bryan's great song, "It Makes Me Think of Home, Sweet Home," have introduced and will sing in their act a new song by George Totten Smith and Byrd Dougherty, two gentlemen who are well known among the profession as authors capable of writing good songs, a song entitled "LARRY." This is not like any other song, but it is an original Irish song, one that will be sung and whistled from Maine to California after it is properly introduced, which it will be by the publisher. It is not restricted to any one singer, but can be sung by anybody, and it will be sung by everybody because it is a good song. Were it otherwise, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy would not sing it and neither would you. We expect every professional who can use a good song on this order to use this one. We make no exceptions. Good songs are hard to get. We predict great success for this song. Send for it.

The wonderful soprano, MISS ROSEMARY GLOSZ, who has a range of over three octaves, late of the "Prince of Pilsen" and Lew Fields' companies, has entered vaudeville, and is creating a positive sensation with her new march song, entitled "SISTER." To say that Miss Glosz created a furore is putting it mildly. She sings this new song with a dash and spirit seldom seen on the vaudeville stage. She being the first to sing it, the publisher had a splendid opportunity of finding out what the song is worth, and it is safe to say that this is the greatest march song sung to-day before the American public. Watch for future announcements regarding same and get it at once. Do not wait, but get it as quickly as you possibly can, as good songs are hard to get. Until regular copies are ready, manuscript copies can be had upon application to Chas. K. Harris, the Publisher.

Van Alstyne's new ballad, "In Dear old Georgia," has received greater applause than any other ballad they have ever used. The press in the cities where they have appeared have been generous in praise of this song.

Katherine Nelson, now playing the soubrette part in The Office Boy, introduces Jerome and Schwartz's clever song "My Irish Molly, O" and reports that it is the biggest encore winner she has ever used.

Lillian Coleman, who has been recently added to the cast of the Babes in the Wood, is successful with the song "In a Kiss." For daintiness it is said to be a winner.

Mamie Remington and "Picks" are singing "The Leader of the German Band" to five and six encores at each performance.

Laura Millard, whose highly cultured soprano voice has won much praise, finds a splendid number in the legitimate serenade song, "Moonlight," by the composer of "Hiawatha" and published by Jerome H. Remick, the publisher who discovered "Hiawatha."

Three instrumental successes in a little over a year is a good record. S. R. Henry has written "Peter Piper," "Polly Prim" and "Priscilla," the latter a new Colonial intermezzo in original style. With these three hits to his credit, it looks as though Mr. Henry had a corner on the instrumental market.

Ida May, now appearing in vaudeville with her singing and dancing "Picks," is winning much favor everywhere. She has selected all of her songs from the Jerome H. Remick catalogue, including "In Dear Old Georgia," "My Sweet Little Caraboo" and the new novelty laugh-provoking coon song by Kendis and Paley entitled "Sympathy."

Mabel Adams, whose artistic work as a violinist has won much favorable comment, uses for her best numbers "Moonlight" and "Poppies," both by Neil Moret and published by Jerome H. Remick and Company.

In The Catch of the Season a new song by W. T. Francis, entitled "Auf Weidersehn," has been introduced by Talleur Andrews. Another song, called "Rainbow," which was part of the English production, is also in rehearsal here. This song was advertised abroad on postals that when held up to the light show a beautiful rainbow.

CAUCHOIS ACQUITTED.

Garret J. Cauchois, a music publisher of Rutherford, N. J., was on trial last week in General Sessions before Justice Foster and a jury, charged by Frederick W. Helmick with selling him 8,000 spurious copies of "The Holy City," which is copyrighted by Boosey and Company, of London. Helmick testified that he believed he was buying the genuine article and not an American copy, which had been printed in alleged violation of the copyright law. Cauchois admitted that the songs he sold Helmick for $200 were copies and declared that Helmick was aware of this fact. The jury after debating on the case for half an hour acquitted Cauchois. Cauchois will have to face another trial, however, on a charge of violating the Trademark law.

ABE HOLZMAN CAPTURES MR. RAFFLES.

Abe Holzman, the composer of "Yankee Grit," "Uncle Sammy," "Blaze Away" and numerous other instrumental successes, captured the much talked of "Mysterious Mr. Raffles" last Wednesday and received the $300 reward offered by the New York American. It is said that Mr. Holzman began his search on the day "Mr. Raffles" disappeared and worked diligently for 21 days, constantly carrying a copy of the paper in his left hand, with his right full of the daily coupons. Mr. Holzman is receiving congratulations from his many friends on the resule of his detective work.

GRACE CAMERON IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A cablegram from Grace Cameron states that she opened at the Empire Theatre in Johannesburg Oct. 16, scoring an immediate success, being offered an indefinite engagement. It is known, however, that she will remain there but six weeks, having contracted to appear in Cape Town in December, after which she will go to London to begin an extended tour in vaudeville. Miss Cameron is using "Dolly Dimples," the song which won fame for her in Piff! Paff! Pouf! She is also singing "Kalamazoo," a strictly American song.

FRANKLIN H. SARGENT, President.

From the article by BRONSON HOWARD in The Century Magazine:

"We have been the first in the world to establish a fully organized school for the training of young men and women for the stage, with a large corps of teachers (twenty-four) for the various branches of the art, with additional lecturers, and with special exercises in each requirement, physical and intellectual. The Conservatoire of Paris immediately comes to the reader's mind. But that excellent institution has no such organization as the most fully organized school of acting in the United States, the oldest of its kind in the world, the AMERICAN ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ARTS, of which Mr. Franklin H. Sargent is the founder and president."

For Catalogue and Information apply to The Secretary, Room 141, Carnegie Hall, New York.

THE ALVIENE SCHOOL of STAGE ARTS

Under personal direction of the celebrated Master, CLAUDE M. ALVIENE.
GRAND OPERA HOUSE BLDG., 263 to 269 8th Avenue, cor. 23d St., New York City.

DRAMATIC Art Dept. OPERATIC and Musical Dept. STAGE Dancing and Vaudeville Dept.

We do not encourage long courses; the success enjoyed by our pupils has demonstrated that if the talent is there the practical training prior to professional work on the stage can be thoroughly imparted in three to six months' time.

The dramatic and operatic course includes dramatic reading, delivery, etc., voice building and diction, physical expression, gesture, mimic, pantomime, "make up," stage business, stage dancing, fencing, general rehearsal and coaching on individual parts; public student performances every two weeks.

Pupils: Paula Edwardes, Ethel Levy (Mrs. Geo. Cohan), May Buckley, Laura Burt, Corinne, and Bessie De Voie, with Rogers Bros.; Amy Ricard, Barney Gilmore, Will Archie, Wm. Blaisdell, Geo. Martin, Hanlon Bros., Georgie Mack, Murray and Mack, Helen Hale, La Neva, Agnes Mahr, La Rouge Domino, La Mora, Grace Cameron, Manager Nash's daughters, Manager Hopkins' daughter, Opera Manager Grau's daughter, Manager Hanlon's daughter. 1,000 others. Send for illustrated booklet. Success succeeds. Investigate the merits of a school before entering. Failure impossible if we accept you as a student.

PLAYWRITING

FIFTH YEAR

BY MAIL. MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

There are Schools for the teaching of painting, music and other arts. Playwriting is an art. Can you give any sane reason why it cannot be taught? This was the first School of the kind to be established in the world, and it proposes, as it expands, to remain THE first.

SIR HENRY IRVING: "You may be the mightest genius that ever breathed, but if you have not studied the ART of writing for the stage you will never write a good acting play."

MR. THOMAS DIXON, JR., a man of genius, open minded and clear sighted, author of "THE CLANSMAN," a play that is turning people away at every performance throughout the South, kindly writes: "I learned more from your course in one year than I could have gotten in ten years unaided. It is new, not found in books, thorough and practical. The student of the drama who neglects this course is missing the opportunity of a life. I could never have written 'THE CLANSMAN' without the grasp of principles I got from you. Our association has been an inspiration to me from the first." Circular. Address.
